Woodsman, spare that tree!

The city says so and the city has the Criminal Code of Canada to back it up, as four youthful wood-gatherers learned this morning in police court. The boys had beenchopping nds as far south as down trees on Wantage Road for fuel.

Only One Answer

D'INCE RUPERT needs new schools, new sewer system, complete overhaul of roads, finishing of uncompleted roads connecting avenues, new water lines, complete modern telephone system, parks and many other things of almost, if not equal,  $\cdot =$ importance.

The citizens may clamor and talk with shame, which all must admit, of our down-at-the-heel and poverty-stricken municipal appearance. And poverty-stricken is the word for it. That is what it

The fact of the matter, which we might as well face, is that, under the present restrictions, there is no way of getting these things. We cannot borrow under the obligations of our special Refunding Act without special permission. We cannot finance our requirements out o four present income which cannot be increased because taxes are at the breaking point as far as the capacity of the taxpayers to pay themselves is concerned and, anyway, the difference between the present mill rate and its legal limit is so narrow as to be inconsequental. So what is the answer? The answer, of course, if Prince Rupert and other municipalities are not to go down through sheer inability to meet their vital requirements, is action without further delay by the provinceaction which has often been recommended by royal commission after royal commission but which has ever been deferred. Other cities are urging this immediate action and have put up strong cases. Possibly, none are worse off or more badly in need of a new deal from the government than is Prince Rupert.

What goes for Victoria, it might be said, goes also for Prince Rupert and here is what the Victoria Colonist says:

"It is common knowledge that this city (Victoria) is at or near the peak of its borrowing powers, that its mill rate is within sight of the legal limit, and that all of the natural increase in its revenues is being taken up in merely standing still. Meanwhile the city has accumulated obligations ahead of it which may run into $20,000,000; for roads, schools, bridges, hospitals, waterworks and other essential capital services. Where is that money to be found? Under today's division of taxation no British Columbia city can hope to keep abreast of its essential requirements out of revenue and borrowing powers depend chiefly on that revenue and its sufficiency. "When it is recalled that the Provincial Government takes all of the liquor profits, pari-mutuel receipts, amusement tax, gasoline taxes; and hands back to the Municipalities a limited percentage of the motor vehicle licences, about 40 per cent of school operating costs, with minor and insufficient disbursements for hospitals and other purposes, mostly structural, it is not difficult to see why the municipalities are in trouble. Outside of federal taxation, theseare among the real revenues deriving from the growth of population in British Columbia, a population which has centred in the cities. "If the government had not withdrawn the former oldtime grants the municipalities would be $5,000,000 better off today on a yearly basis; but meanwhile the province's own revenues have gone up very sharply, as the last budget address indicated. In that, the treasury estimated receipts of $58,888,930 for the current fiscal year closing on March 21 next; referred to Dominion grants totalling $21,857,680, in place of $15,049,439 previously; liquor profits of $11,600,000; gasoline taxes at $3,495,000; and other provincial revenues on a mounting plane. Meanwhile, through accumulated revenue surpluses, the province had pushed its spending above $50,000,000 a year and one official reference said this year it might be $90,000,000. "Meanwhile, it remains a fact that every dollar the province takes from the British Columbia motorist, for example, is one that will not go on any city road. It is the same with liquor profits and the major sources of provincial revenue, now more than twice as high as that of the municipalities themselves. The position has got to the point where something will have to be done about it. No mere patching with a sales tax will enable the cities to provide those services which they must give, and soon. "What is required is an entirely new deal for the municipalities. The province should hand back a substantial proportion of the liguor profits, gasoline revenues, pari-mutuel and amusement taxes, together with a fair share of all other receipts that are extracted now from the cities without any equivalent return. If the municipalities are to care for 85 percent of the population they must be given the means of doing that. If they are to continue to be treated as poor relations of the senior government they will go down. Here is urgent business for the LLegislature when it meets in March, and it must be faced.".... Warm butter and cream it into sugar. Add well-beaten egg and vanilla. Sift dry ingredients together and add alternately with milk to first mixture. Butter bottom and sides of bakedish. Peel and core apples. Cut into half-inch slices, so they resemble pineapple rings. Arrange these apple slices on bottom of bake-dish. Nuts or enerries may be used to fill centres of rings. Sprinkle with sugar and spice mixture. Pour cake mixture over apples. This batter is rather thick and may need to be smoothed on top with a knife. Bake in a moderate oven for 45 minutes. Loosen sides of cake and turn it upside down carefully. Serve hot.
