Efficiency

IT IS A HABIT on this continent to admire, and sometimes to boast of efficiency. Intricate machines and complex organizations are at the service of all citizens, producing and distributing the goods that they need or desire. The working of no hope of getting any until an these machines and organizations is so much taken as a matter of course that we are inclined to find cause for personal grievance when the newspaper is not delivered, when the electric light fails, or when ignition trouble stalls the car on a deserted by-road.

Yet such things happen to all of us, not invariably, but frequently enough to show that efficiency is still far from flawless. It might be possible to demonstrate that many lives are shortened by the more or less violent rises in blood pressure that occur when a machine or an organization lets us down. At any rate, the lack of serenity in modern life is traceable to the number and complexity of the things on which we are dependent.

Whether or not we can justly boast of our efficiency as a people, it is said to be a fact that the efficiency of the average individual has declined in the past five decades. In the horse-and-buggy days, a driver could make at least a temporary repair when a trace broke. His modern counterpart, when a comparable accident puts his car out of commission, is to telephone to a garage.

-Failure of electricity was unimportant in 1900, when its principal use was for lighting, and every householder had immediately available alternative lighting systems in gas jets, oil lamps or candles.

There was no real substitute for the newspaper in 1900 any more than there is today, but missing an issue was less serious. It was not then a probability that the missing issue would contain details of some new scheme of a bureaucrat for bedevilling the unfortunate taxpayer.

Perhaps the aim of modern education should be Mrs. Noel. Jones to bring up children as competent mechanics and electricians, so that they will be able to avoid the Passes In City frustrations entailed by our labor-saving inventions. It is too late to do much for the older generation-It must find for itself a philosophy that will reconcile the conflict between efficiency and happiness.

CIALATE-WINTER SUN

THE EARLY PART OF FEBRUARY retains some features of winter that are well regarded. The main one is that it still is unnecessary to get up early in order to see the sun rise. The glory of its rising is available not only to the worker who has to be abroad betimes, but to the loafer who sleeps turn. late. In summer, people boast that they were up with the sun, but at this time of year, anyone with a good appetitie finds it hard to lie abed that long.

The sunset may still be seen in the afternoon. It is much handier to have the sun set during the day, without having to make a job of sitting up for it late into the evening. Another good feature of the season is that neither sunrise nor sunset, casually seen during some days, stirs up much comment. It is mainly in summer or autumn when these great glories of the sky bring forth exclamations of joy. Few things set aback a lovely scene so thoroughly as the overly articulate pleasure of those who would not notice it if the sight were common.

Some tone-deaf folk secretly like this season because there are few birds to wake one in the mornings. There still is plenty time for sleep, as in the deep dark of winter; but the great fact of early February is the return of the sun. This process has been going on since shortly before Christmas, but people did not pay much attention to the sun during reacthe year-end holidays. But now the sun is due out of the earth more and more each day. It is something to dwell upon with hope. The sun returns fresh and wonderful out of the earth, as though it were a new thing. May the sun always return to shine upon the world, and may there always be people here to welcome it.

Editor, Daily News: Regarding all the unenlightening letters of late about the power situation, have any of the Junior Chamber of Commerce suffered a shortage of water? How many of our good citizens took extra care of their water pipes because this did not happen last year? And yet how many of them had frozen pipes this winter for the first time? ## Over 1000 Petition

Junior Chamber of Commerce members were busy during the last week and obtained signatures of approximately 1115 citizens for a petition demanding that city council take immediate action to have the present water and power facilities investigated by a competent and impartial authority. The petition was read at the city council meeting Monday night and, like their resolution, together with the senior Chamber brief, was filed.

The petition may have been quickly dealt with, think Javcee members, but as Mayor Rudderham said Monday night, it is "valuable to keep around".

Good Services Bring Bonuses

In recognition of exceptional services rendered during water emergency period a total of $250 in bonuses were paid to City Engineer D. C. Stewart, Waterworks Foreman Carl J Gustafson and Road Foreman George Geddes. This was recommended at a city council meeting Monday night by the Board of Works committee. "Apparently these men forgot all about time," said chairman Ald. George Casey, "as they kept on the job day and night." Mr Stewart and Mr. Gustafson each received $100 while Mr. Geddes is the recipient of $50.
