Pilot Saves Crew's Lives

Queen Charlotte Airlines Loses Another Plane Down Coast

VANCOUVER. (CP)—Prompt action of a pilot was credited today for the safety of his three-man crew aboard an 18-passenger Vickers flying boat which crashed on Sunday, crash landed and sank off Rock Bay, in Johnstone Straits just above Seymour Narrows, 140 miles north of here. There were no passengers on board.

Pilot W. J. Peters of Queen Charlotte Airlines landed the craft close to shore and all escaped from the flaming plane uninjured. A short time later they were taken aboard a logging company's tug.

The fire started in the port engine.

The crew exhausted the fire fighting equipment which was aboard and the plane sank shortly after the landing.

Pilot Peters and his crew of Co-Pilot Walter Birtland, Flight Engineer Kip Lace and Crew Chief Curly Nairn, all of Vancouver, were on a ferry flight from Forward Harbor to bring the plane here for a check-up.

Clarksdale Victory Victims Are Being Washed Up On Hippa Island

SEATTLE (CP)—A United States Coastguard amphibious plane awaited clear weather at Annette Island near Ketchikan today, the Coastguard said, to check on a Canadian fisherman's report of bodies of two members of the crew of the ill-fated Army transport Clarksdale Victory having been washed ashore on Hippa Island on the west coast of the Queen Charlottes.

The fisherman, Albert Duffy, told Queen Charlotte police yesterday that he had sighted the bodies last Monday. Actions of birds, he said, indicated that other victims may have floated on to the beach.

The Clarksdale Victory ran aground on Hippa Island last November 24 and broke up in heavy seas.

Four of the crew of fifty-three men were rescued and the bodies of four others were found several days later.

Congress Urged to Meet Possible War Emergency

WASHINGTON, D.C. (CP)—An immediate ban on all exports of petroleum products from the United States was recommended today by the House of Representatives Interstate Commerce committee because of domestic shortage and "gravity of the outlook of oil supplies in the event of a war emergency."

BRITAIN NOT DEVALUATING

Statement Made by Chancellor of Exchequer

LONDON, (CP)—Sir Stafford Cripps declared today that Great Britain does not contemplate devaluing the pound in spite of the French action in cutting the value of the franc.

"We do not believe this will be rendered necessary or advisable," the Chancellor of the Exchequer advised the House of Commons.

It is also recommended that Congress set up a committee to study the petroleum and develop new sources of supply within the country.

TRAIL BLAST INJURES FOUR

TRAIL. (CP)—Four men were injured today when explosion and fire swept a carpenter shop of the Consolidated Mining & Smelting Co. in suburban Warfield. Workmen suffered severe head and shoulder burns. The cause of the explosion was not immediately known.

DEVALUATION IS DEPLORED

PARIS (CP)—France on Sunday created her new devalued franc to permit her to slash fifty percent off the price of French goods in the world market.

In doing this, Premier Robert Schuman's government overrode British objections and in effect defied the International Monetary Fund which deplored the action and has cut off further loans for France.

The value of the dollar in Paris raised, however.

The move brings eighty percent more francs for the dollar on a straight trading basis.

Premier Schuman declared today that, without devaluation of the franc, France was faced with economic ruin and widespread unemployment. He asked the National Assembly to authorize the creation of a free money market and to permit the free movement of gold in France.

Cardinal Is Critical

Says Present Situation In Occupied Germany Resembles "Third Reich"

COLOGNE (CP)—Joseph Cardinal Frings, Archbishop of Cologne, likened the four-power occupation of Germany to Adolf Hitler's Third Reich and declared its administration "renders democracy ridiculous."

Hunger strikes in the British and American zones represented "spontaneous outburst of the people," the cleric asserted.

Frings urged speedy increases in Allied food imports.

"The situation is desperate," he said. "It cannot long endure."

LOCAL ARTILLERYMEN WILL ATTEND WAINWRIGHT WINTER TRAINING

Two officers, two N.C.O.'s and four gunners from the 120th Coast Battery, 15th Anti-Aircraft Regiment, will leave here on Friday of this week for Wainwright military camp in Alberta to attend "Exercise Husky II." Reserve units throughout Alberta, as well as artillerymen from British Columbia will send about 250 personnel to the two-week camp.

Winter camp training for members of Alberta and British Columbia Reserve Force units will be on a larger scale. Unit quotas of attendance have been enlarged and in place of last year's single week of training, this year's camp will be held between February 1 and 15.

At the present time personnel of the Royal Canadian Engineers are preparing 22 buildings for occupation. These buildings, which formerly housed prisoner-of-war personnel, will include quarters, dining halls, lecture rooms, medical inspection rooms, drill halls and vehicle storage buildings. The Engineers are also clearing roads and weapon ranges in the area.

During the camp active force officers of Western Command will administer the training camp and assist unit instructors in cold-weather training.

Using instructors with experience in northern bushcraft and the ways of trappers, reservists will experience training in some of the interesting methods of cold-weather survival. Skiing, snowshoeing and cross country trekking is to be taught by professionals. Other phases of training will include: range firing of all types of weapons, use of wireless and outdoor communication, building of bivouacs, the clearing of mines and "booby-traps" and the use of demolitions, and driving of all types of winterized vehicles.

One of the interesting and important phases to be carried out during the camp will be testing of guns and equipment under dry cold conditions.

The latest in army winter clothing, ski and snowshoe equipment has been sent to the camp. On arrival at Wainwright all ranks will be issued with full ski equipment, snowshoes, sleeping bags, winter parkas, parkas, moccasins, polaroid sun glasses, and other winter equipment.

During the camp, personnel will be accommodated in quarters, but during an overnight scheme, troops will be given the chance of living out in bivouacs and doing their own field or mess-tin cooking.

The group is comprised of two officers, two non-commissioned officers and four gunners. They are Lieut. Frank Parlette, Lieut. John Good, Bombardiers N. O. Birkeland and A. J. May and Gunners G. Olson, J. J. Basson, D. Finlayson and D. Peggale.

GIVE EXHIBITS TO MUSEUM HERE

A number of specimens of marine fossils, clams, limpets and other types of pre-historic life, have been presented to the Museum of Northern British Columbia by John B. Scott, forest ranger aboard the B.C. Forestry service patrol boat White Cloud. The samples, which will enrich the exhibits in the museum, were found on the east coast of the Queen Charlotte Islands. They have been given to Mayor Arnold. Three samples of early Indian culture also have been given to Indian Agent F. E. Anfield, who plans to turn them over to the museum. They are a ceremonial coat, a chief's "talking stick," and a war bow from the upper Skeena River. They were given to Mr. Anfield by the Kispiox tribe.

No comment could be obtained at the local C.P.A. office other than that it was an "investigating" flight. Pilots Lee and Stevenson arrived in the city Saturday.

Big Mine Development

A LONG-RANGE major mining development upon large and permanent lines has been going along quietly at Alice Arm for the past year. The old Dolly Varden Railway right-of-way has been in process of conversion for a distance of eighteen miles from beach at Alice Arm to the famous Torbrit mine on the Upper Kitsault River. Now the Mining Corporation of Canada is having the Northwest Construction Co. of Prince Rupert carry out the contract of establishing at the mine a 300-ton mill and other appurtenances at a cost of $250,000 with a $150,000 townsite development job coming up later in the year.

While we have not been hearing much about it, this constitutes one of the largest mining development operations in British Columbia in several years. Proceeding as it is at a time when the metal markets are in none too robust a state, it is a project which lends encouragement to the future of the mining industry in this district as a whole and to Alice Arm in particular.

Torbrit, near the old Dolly Varden and better known to the pioneers as the Toric mine, lies in a position relative to Alice Arm something like the famous Premier does to Stewart. Transportation of the milled ore from the mine to beach at Alice Arm will be by truck over the road, similar to the method which is being adopted now by Premier which for years carried its ore on the 16-mile tramline from mine to beach at Stewart.

BULLOCK-WEBSTER

CREDITED WITH doing more for the theatre in Canada than any other person, Leslie Bullock-Webster, former director of school and community drama for the British Columbia department of education, has been named among seven award winners for 1947 by the Canadian Drama Society.

After promoting drama on the west coast and other parts of the Dominion for 46 years, Bullock-Webster retired last spring and returned to Britain where he now lives at Fowey, England.

One of the post prolific playwrights in Canada, the tall, erect and handsome Bullock-Webster was widely known as well as an actor, public speaker, politician, business man and soldier. Born 70 years ago in Landebr, Wales, he became an actor when injuries forced his discharge from the British Army during the South African War.

After playing in several musical comedies on the London stage, Bullock-Webster joined a touring company which was coming to the United States. That was the first step to his initial trip to Canada.

"I had always wanted to go to Canada," he said later. "I went to the Okanagan Valley in British Columbia and helped the late George Kirby form an amateur club.

"Later I returned to England to accept an offer by George Dance — later Sir George Dance — to play in 'The Chinese Honeymoon.' He remained with the company several years and finally became stage manager and director.

After he recovered from injuries suffered when his horse fell in a music hall turn, Bullock-Webster came to Prince Rupert in 1910 where he was elected alderman and founded the Prince Rupert Little Theatre. At the same time he founded and became manager of the Northern B.C. Agricultural Association.

After the First World War, in which he served as company commander of the 54th Kootenay Battalion, and finally as brigade major, he became labor-manager of the Vancouver Harbor Marine Shipyard and founded the B.C. Dramatic School. From 1921 to 1933 more than 700 students studied stagecraft, literature and public speaking at the dramatic school in Victoria and Vancouver. Some won scholarships in London; others have done well on London and New York stages.

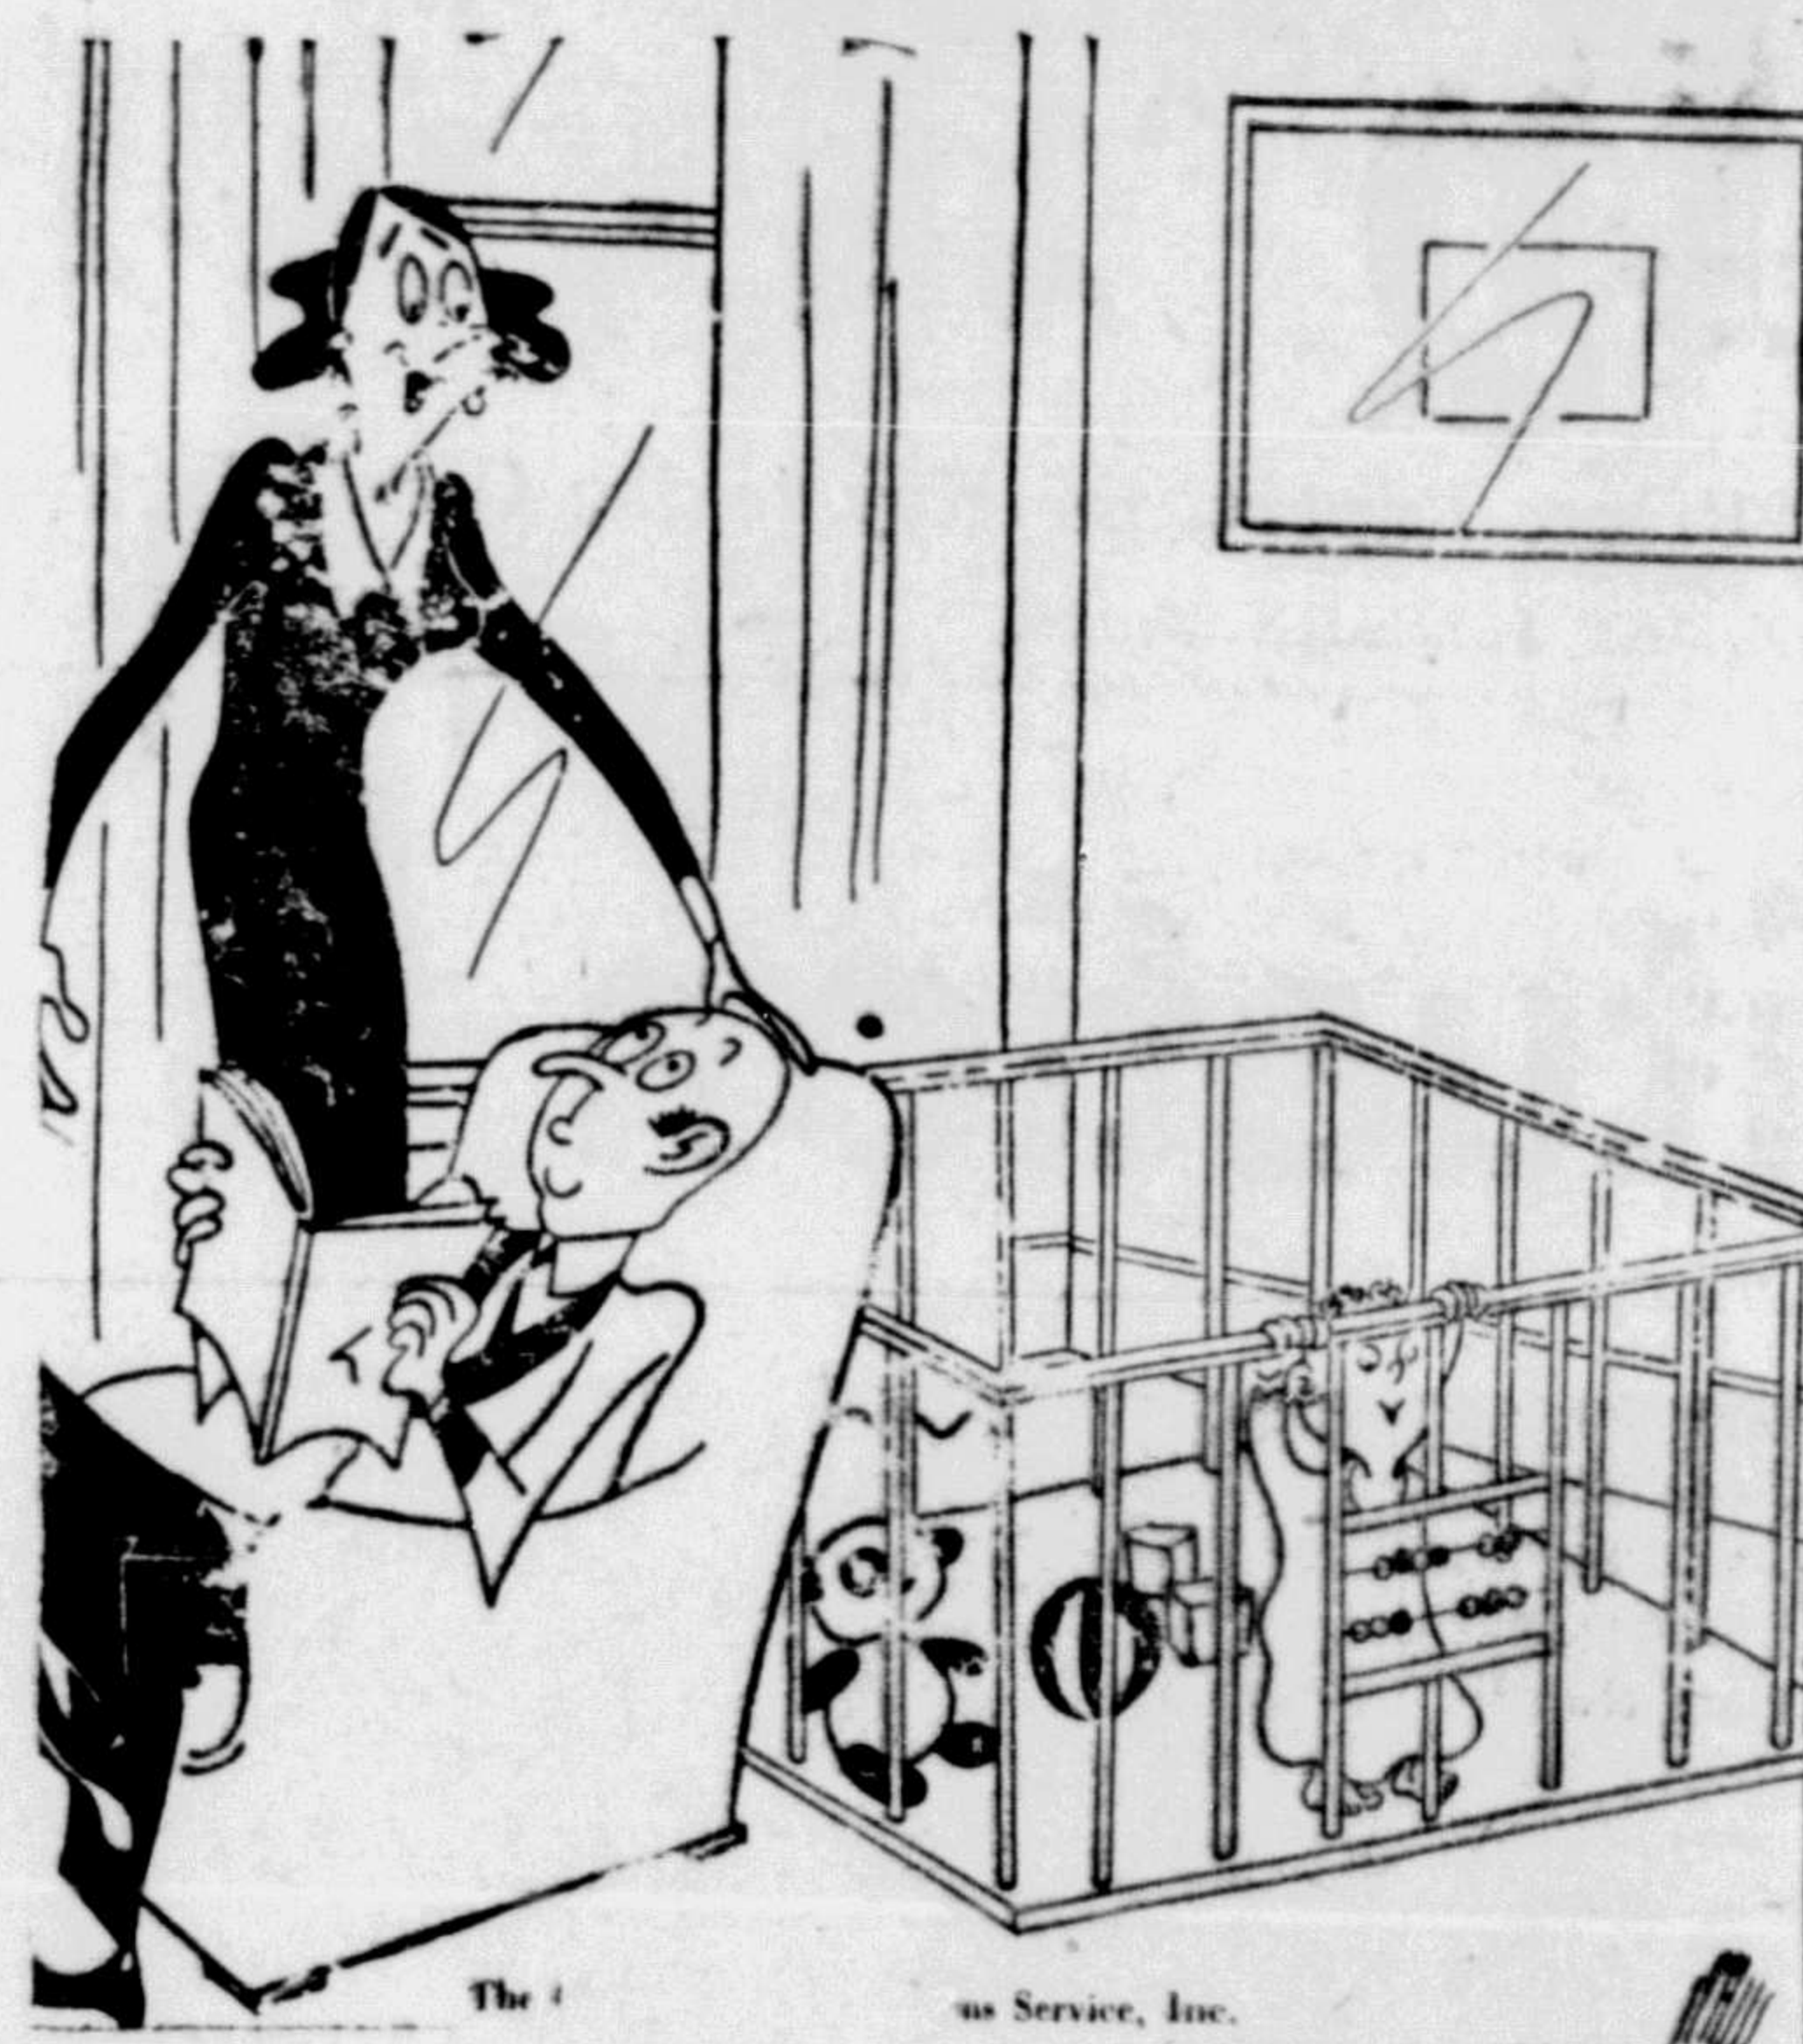

The Drama Association grew so rapidly that Education Minister George Weir created a drama branch of his department in 1935 and placed Bullock-Webster in charge.

He visited all parts of the province to form drama groups. Festival's profits were usually distributed for welfare people. When the Second World War came there were 198 Little Theatres, Guilds, Societies and Drama Clubs and school clubs developing.

REPEL RODENTS

SCIENCE COMES up with justification for the squeamishness of those, particularly the ladies, who dislike rodents. Rats, and other gnawing mammals, can transmit disease and should be destroyed before they can cause trouble to human beings as well as to property. Cleanliness is the first line of defence against the rat. He likes to romp in litter. If premises become rat-infested, prompt steps should be taken to exterminate the invaders.

THIS AND THAT

LIFE in this Prince Rupert

by BIDDEE JINKS

There was a large group this year, and I one of them. Individually, it was said: "This year our family is cutting down on Christmas cards." The announcement was given gravely and received as such on all sides. Was it not a reasonable and sensible attitude? Expenses in general were rising and no let-up in sight. Besides, everyone knows the mail carries bags and bags of large white envelopes—with or without a 4-cent stamp—but people we would seldom see if they lived in the city. And so, just under the mailing deadline, this slumped listing slithered into the letter slot and was away.

Then things got in reverse. Cards started coming our way and suddenly it was all very different. Each one was examined and admired and stuck up where it might be seen often. In fact, each lunch-time was given to the rite and every day seemed better than the last. To myself I began to make remarks, saying repeatedly: "Never have I enjoyed cards as I have this year." And a few days later one of "the group" said, "You know, I hardly sent a card this year, but I'll never do it that way again. Never have I appreciated hearing from friends so much—and from relatives with whom I am out of touch the rest of the year." And nobody asked the why of it. It was plain that some established link with people we like was threatened—by ourselves—and we did not approve.

With the cards came old memories made shining new. Done by a mere scrawled note, or an ordinary greeting, they winged in from scattered points. One from the lady who first knocked on my door, the day after I took up residence in new surroundings—and with a new prefix to my name. And from another who, soon after, "just took me under her wing and taught me to play bridge as it ought to be played, my dear."

There was no mention of the time she wept full, round tears of exasperation when I bid a perfectly logical bid—but nevertheless, ruined her chances for the evening's prize. I suppose there was no thought of it even. From the distance of miles and years, the event is blurred, to me, by the kind way she had of popping up when I was spending a long day alone. Country roads invited and in her car we followed their lead until the sun's heat slackened, and the colors accumulated their glory over the great Rocky ridge. The day was dying. Soon a coolness would sweep down from over the foothills. Soon too, dinner must be ready. And gayly, with no reluctance, we turned to the home road.

There were cards from people not seen in years and several from those I had never seen. For instance, with a letter, there was one signed, "Love from John and Alice." Now John is a complete stranger to me. But, tho' I would not know Alice if she walked to me door, we are good friends. Our correspondence started from the familiar setting of husband being so all-fired busy or tired, or disabled, that he says in that plaintive way men have reserved for such occasions: "Oh darling, you write this time. You do it better than I—and anyway, I never know what to say." Alice and I had the same reply. "But, dear, . . . you were the ones that went to school together far over in the north of Scotland. After so long—how many years is it anyway?—I don't wonder that you don't know what to say but what about Me?" Which was in passing, for we both sat down wrote, and got better acquainted than are our fond husbands. We know how much each of us enjoys music and concerts and choir work; what we read, know about our children arriving and the age they walked and their cute sayings which have grown now into events of clubs or school life, not to mention girlfriends—and the opposite, of course. In short, I like Alice, like to hear from her; and it started from a Christmas greeting.

There is the follow-up too, which is almost as fine. Sometimes it is better, for its arrives during that two-week lull in January—if there is a lull.

Yesterday a letter came from a woman who was my 'next-door' for three years. She left Rupert for Port Alberni and, along with the aroma of her date cake and remembering the way she always had bread if I had none, her letter brought a nice description of that growing centre. Writing just as she speaks which few folk seem to do—she says: "Have you ever been to Alberni? It is much like Rupert except there are fewer hills. There is more growth too, and gardening. We bought a little home here with a nice lot and have plenty of fruit trees with it. Apples, blue plums, Bing Cherries and small fruit bushes. We have roses of all colors—in fact, we took roses out of the garden for the table on Christmas Day.

"This is quite a large place and growing. Woodwards have a store here and are building another. It will open in March. Hudson's Bay store is here also and Mac & Mac built a lovely hardware this spring. Besides, there are a lot of other real nice shops, just like Rupert."

She closed by saying, "We sure were glad to get your card, and hope ours got to you. It made me get to thinking what nice times we had in Rupert. There are no morning cups of tea now, like we used to have, once we got acquainted." Which reminded me of the times she told me frankly: "I like you now, before that . . . well." And I had thought myself such a chummy soul!

They are all put away. So far, I have not gathered them together to send down to Ellen Harris for dispersal to Children's Hospital. Come to think of it, Miller Bay is closer . . . and I hear they too enjoy old Christmas cards.

Peeresses Seek Seats

Viscountess Says Women Should Have Same Status As Men In Lords

By JAMES McCOOK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON—Grey-haired Viscountess Rhondda, editor, publisher and student of international affairs, says the time has come for women to have "a seat, place and voice" in the House of Lords.

She has joined forces with 22 other peeresses in their own right in organizing a petition they hope will redress "divers great grievances" and admit them to the upper chamber with the same status as men.

"There are many questions I would like to discuss in the Lords, but as a woman I cannot be admitted," said Lady Rhondda.

"Even if I sought election to the House of Commons and was successful it is doubtful whether I would be allowed to sit there because I am a peeress."

The petition is timed to bring action from the peers. The Labor government has indicated it will introduce legislation to admit women if the present peers are willing. But when a resolution to admit women came before the upper chamber this year, most government, Conservative and Liberal members agreed the time was inopportune for change.

Lady Rhondda visited Canada in 1919, saw her family's land and other holdings in Northern Alberta and British Columbia and travelled down the Peace River in a ship named after her father, D. A. Thomas.

NEED MEN AND WOMEN

She gave the peeresses' viewpoint thus:

"There's a general view in this country that many questions should be considered by both men and women. The absence of women means a loss to the House as a good debating chamber."

"Some peeresses have particular subjects in which they have a special interest. I would be interested in a wide range of subjects, especially international affairs. As editor of Time and Tide, a weekly publication, I have attempted to show it is interested in an infinite number of subjects as I am myself."

Baroness Ravensdale, another peeress in her own right, said she was interested in all subjects concerning young people and Baroness Beaumont is interested in hospitals, infant welfare and clinics.

This is the resumption of an old fight for Lady Rhondda. She raised the issue when the

Sex Disqualification (Removal)

Act was passed in 1919 and permitted women to take seats in the Commons. A committee debated her petition to have a similar privilege given peeresses but rejected it.

The petition will be continued unaffected by the Labor government bill to cut the Lord's veto of Commons legislation from two years to one. Lady Rhondda said some form of second chamber probably would continue although an inquiry into the composition of the present House might result in some changes.

GIFT OF FOOD WAS GODSEND

Appreciation Voiced in Letter Received from London

Acknowledging the Godsend of a food parcel received just before Christmas, a Prince Rupert woman is in receipt of a letter from a 39-year old family man in Hornsey, England. The letter gives a pathetic picture of the hardships which Britain is still having to put up with in the way of food scarcity even in these days after the years of war privation.

"Thank you very much for your parcel," says the letter. "It is very kind of you considering you are thousands of miles away and we are strangers. My father was very pleased with the cocoa. It was the first white flour we had had for years. The tea was a Godsend as we had run out and had none.

"The rationing here is pretty severe at present—potatoes, 3 pounds a week; butter, 2 ounces; margarine, 8 ounces; lard, one ounce; meat, one shilling's worth; cheese, 2 ounces; bacon, 2 ounces a fortnight; one egg a fortnight; 3 loaves a week. All other foods are on points. We get 20 points a month but, as we have to surrender 21 points for a tin of salmon or 10 points for a tin of syrup, we cannot get much of them.

"Clothes are 20 coupons for eight months. A suit takes 26 coupons; boots, nine; shirts, seven.

"I think it will be easier here in three years' time but we have had rationing for eight years and I find I cannot work as hard as I did pre-war.

"Your country has helped us tremendously during the war.

"I notice from your address you must be in the wilds of Canada. It must be very lonely for you, especially in the winter time."

HOW CAN I ???

By ANNE ASHLEY

Q. How can I remove scorched spots from cottons and linens?

A. These can be removed, if only slightly scorched, by wetting in cold water and laying in the sun as often as the water evaporates. If the article is colored, of course, this treatment might fade it.

Q. How can I sweeten acid fruits, such as gooseberries, without using so much sugar?

A. Less sugar will be required if one-half teaspoonful of soda is used to a quart of fruit, and stirred before sweetening.

Q. How can I remove oil stains from the floor?

A. By wetting the spots with ammonia, then washing with soap and warm water.

SAVOY WINS
SENIOR GAME

Port Edward and Bo-Me-Hi Are Intermediate Winners

In the Senior basketball league Saturday night Brownwoods strengthened their already firm grasp on cellar (not stellar) position in the league by falling before Savoy's by a score of 49-40. Throughout the quarterly grind, Brownwoods fell into arrears step-by-step until the final quarter when they rallied somewhat. The last quarter saw them mark up 14 points against nine for Savoy, a feat, which, however, was insufficient.

Rupert Holkestad was top marksman for the hotelmen, with 13 points, followed by Joe Davis with 11. Reg Lavigne scored 12 for Brownwoods and Mel Thompson scored 10.

in the Intermediate league, won their second victory out of three games, a narrow, triumph which saw them on the long end of a 32-30 score in their game with Merchants.

As usual, they invaded the city with plenty of spare players, a policy that may or may not have something to do with the pleasing show they have put up so far.

Port Edward's victory was a fourth-quarter turnaround that upset earlier indications. At the end of the first half, the visitors trailed by eleven points, a margin which they had narrowed down to the two points by the end of the third quarter.

In the final quarter, Port Edward marked up seven points while Merchants scored a meagre three.

Top marksmen were T. Venn for Port Edward, with 11 points and Haugan for Merchants, with nine.

BO-ME-HI IS STILL UNBEATEN

Bo-Me-Hi gift to intermediate basketball maintained its unbroken record of victories in the second half of the winter series when they snatched a two-point win from the determined Fashion Footwear crew for a 23-21 win.

The High School lads had many an uneasy moment during the night's opener as the shoemen crowded into the lead on two occasions, ending the third quarter three points ahead of the students.

High School regained the lead in the final quarter when Douglas Shier sank four out of six free throws to which D. Scherk and R. Spring each added field baskets.

Scherk was high scorer for the students with 10 points, while Interneta topped the scoring for Fashion Footwear with eight.

Gene Tunney, who retired undefeated after taking the heavy-weight boxing crown from Jack Dempsey in 1926, gained his first championship 25 years ago by outpointing Battling Levinsky in 12 rounds for the United States light-heavyweight title. This is the drawing that beguiled this city's pioneers. W. J., in his reminiscences today, recalls the enthusiasm with which the plan was greeted.

Reminiscences By W.J. and Reflections

the summer of 1910, the virtue of its forbears. Well, one day years ago, while mulling over a proof, a suggestion was heard, and ordinary, everyday prudence collapsed. There was more than one hoist. There were two. It was there that capacity was misjudged, this being learned later on. There was no feeling of remorse, or suspicion of having been betrayed. Life took on a strange gladness. Vision became affected in a manner and in a way not experienced previously. For example, there were fourteen route boys and although personally acquainted with each, observation persisted in the conviction that there were twenty-eight. We thought it remarkably strange at the time.

ness, rather than pleasure-bent. And so, rollers persist, which is fair enough in the absence of ice sports. It was Luke Marren who, a way back in railway buildings days, first brought the idea here, and backed his judgment with his cash. He started a good-sized rink on Sixth Avenue, on the site now occupied by the armory. Luke, who returned to Ontario years ago, lived on the premises and, if enterprise did not show several barrels of mazuma (grade A), it was not for lack of trying. He stayed with it, through flush periods, and times not so good.

President D. G. Stewart of the hospital board reported at a meeting of the board that a legacy of 1,000 pounds left by Miss Moffatt of Scotland in memory of her brother, Adam (Grandpa) Moffatt, would realize $4,600 and put the hospital out of debt.

The first group of cottages of the Ridley Home, Eighth Avenue at Conrad Street, was formally opened by Archbishop F. H. Du Vernet. Following the opening, friends held a grocery shower to supply the place. Miss Gillett, of New Westminster, was matron.

UNEMPLOYMENT CONTRIBUTIONS

Local Employment Advisory Committee Would Have Them Increased

Arising out of discussions on the unemployment situation the local Employment Committee at its regular monthly meeting at the end of the week went on record as recommending to the Department of Labor that the amount of contributions to be made by employees and employers should be increased so that they would guarantee the payment of at least $25 per month to a married man when unemployed and proportionately to single workers.

A recommendation was also made that the form given to any employee when he leaves a position should be made out in James Bremner in connection with the recent visit of Mr. Ivary of the apprenticeship branch of the department of labor. Mr. Bremner was anxious to enroll two apprentices and the local committee was assisting.

The local employment situation was reported serious but there was very definite assurance that there will be an early improvement and it might be that there would be a shortage of workers by the late spring. Excerpts from regional committee's minutes indicate that the recommendations and criticisms by the local committee have aroused much favorable comment and in some cases initiated considerations of vital problems.

Present by invitation was City Clerk H. D. Thain is acting as police magistrate in the absence of Magistrate W. D. Vance from the city. He heard a couple of cases during the week-end, fining Andrew Cecil, Indian, $10 and costs for drunkenness and dismissing Alma Murray on a drunkenness charge.

LOCAL MAN IN PICTURES

Arvid Mattson Seen in News Reel at End of Week

Friends of Arvid Mattson attending the local theatre last week were pleasantly surprised to see him appear on the news-reel. The picture was made during the live fur show held by the Lower Mainland Fur Breeders' Association in Vancouver last November. Arvid, who in partnership with Charlie Haan, is establishing what will be known as the Star Mink Ranch, flew to Vancouver last fall and entered his choice silverblu male mink in the show.

Arvid wanted to get an idea of how his stock compared with that of other breeders in the south. Although he made the mistake of entering his mink in the dark silverblu class instead of the medimu, the little fur-bearer came home with a prize ribbon.

During the winter a mink's diet usually runs to ground fish meal mixed with cereal and a bit of horse meat if it happens to be available. However, on his way back from the fur show the silverblu was treated to a sirloin steak at the Port Hardy Hotel. The steak wasn't intended as a banquet or a reward for winning a ribbon. It was the only meat Arvid could procure on the first of the two days they were grounded at Port Hardy. On the second day the silverblu went back to a fish diet after his manager visited the fishermen's wharf.

Last summer the two partners decided to make a start in the mink raising business. Arvid had three eastern standard mink he wished to keep for breeding purposes and to these were added 15 silverblu and six half-bloods all of which were purchased from a southern mink breeder last September.

Since August Arvid has spent his spare time erecting necessary buildings on their ranch site in the former army camp area near the end of Eleventh Avenue. In a light, well ventilated shed the mink are now housed, each in its own cage. The cages have hay-furnished sleeping quarters constructed of wood with a wire mesh runway attached.

Fortunately a small group of mink do not need a great deal of attention except during the breeding and whelping periods. Normally they are given one feeding a day which is served to them in the evening. Fresh water is put in their drinking cans twice a day, not because they have a great thirst, but because they apparently, like to wash behind their ears each morning and to do this they shove their heads down into the drinking containers as far as they can, spilling most of the water in the process.

FEBRUARY IS MATING TIME

February is the mating season and then, 42 to 67 days later the kittens begin to appear. Four is considered an average sized family, for a mink. While the mother is feeding her young she is fed twice a day and it isn't long before she is carrying part of her rations into the nest to supplement the milk diet of her youngsters. At about six weeks of age the kittens are weaned and placed in cages of their own.

If the fur farmer is building up a herd, chances are the young mink will be kept for breeding purposes unless they appear to be below standard or there are too many males. In such cases they are pelted and may eventually grace the back of a madame or miss who has never even heard of a mink farm. Large, light and medium colored silverblu mink pelts were bringing $55 to $60 in New York recently.

Both Arvid Mattson and Nelson Rowe, who is also starting a mink farm on Eleventh Avenue, feel that with a little inducement, breeders in other parts of Canada might be inclined to establish themselves in this area. The ever-present supply of fish and moderate weather are two factors that make Prince Rupert a favored spot in the eyes of mink breeders.

strict in the helpful counsel and co-operative enthusiasm shown to the Chamber of Commerce movement generally.

The following officers were then named for 1948:

President, Roy Calderwood.
Vice-President, Phil Hoskins.
Treasurer, A. H. Dockrill.
Secretary, R. L. Brash

Mr. Dockrill turned over the President's chair to Mr. Calderwood who made a forceful and thought-provoking address, attributing success in the work to a five-point program of planning, community interest, leadership, service and co-operation. Determining what was needed most, the President set it forth so that all members could have a copy on paper, form committees to look after every phase of the plan, and then buckle up belts and "go after it."

Mr. Calderwood stated that every member of the community and district must assume his or her share in facing unitedly the economic and social problems of the district and that no better position could be taken than to throw whole-hearted support into Chamber of Commerce work which is united across Canada in working for understanding and organized interest of conservation and future prosperity of the whole country in which communities and centres such as this may grow and prosper.

Mr. Calderwood made an appeal to all members of the district, farmers, employees of various industries and business men to interest themselves in the organization's activities and demonstrate the progressive spirit which prevailed.

A welcome was extended to visiting Prince Rupert Chamber of Commerce member, J. T. Harvey, who spoke a word of greeting from his members at Prince Rupert.
