Snatcher
Attacks
City Girl

A brazen purse-snatcher last night strongarmed a canvasser for the Prince Rupert European Flood Relief committee and made off with an estimated $20 in donations.

Victim of the attack was Miss Winifred King, accountant at Kalen Consumer's Co-operative Association.

Miss King said that she had just come out of a house and was waiting on the street for her partner, Mrs. A. Dewit, who was canvassing Tatlow Street with her, when she was grabbed from behind.

"My arms were pinned behind me and I couldn't move," she told the Daily News.

"When I screamed, the man tore my purse from under my arm and ran."

Miss King said the time of the attack was at 8:30 p.m. She described the man as "short and heavy-set" and wore a dark coat and a rain hat.

Miss King said she ran into the nearest house where the lady of the home telephoned the police.

RCMP said this morning the area around Tatlow, Fifth and Sixth avenues was searched immediately but to no avail.

This is the second purse-snatching complaint to come from that area, police said. First complaint was laid by Miss Ruby Nelson about a week ago.

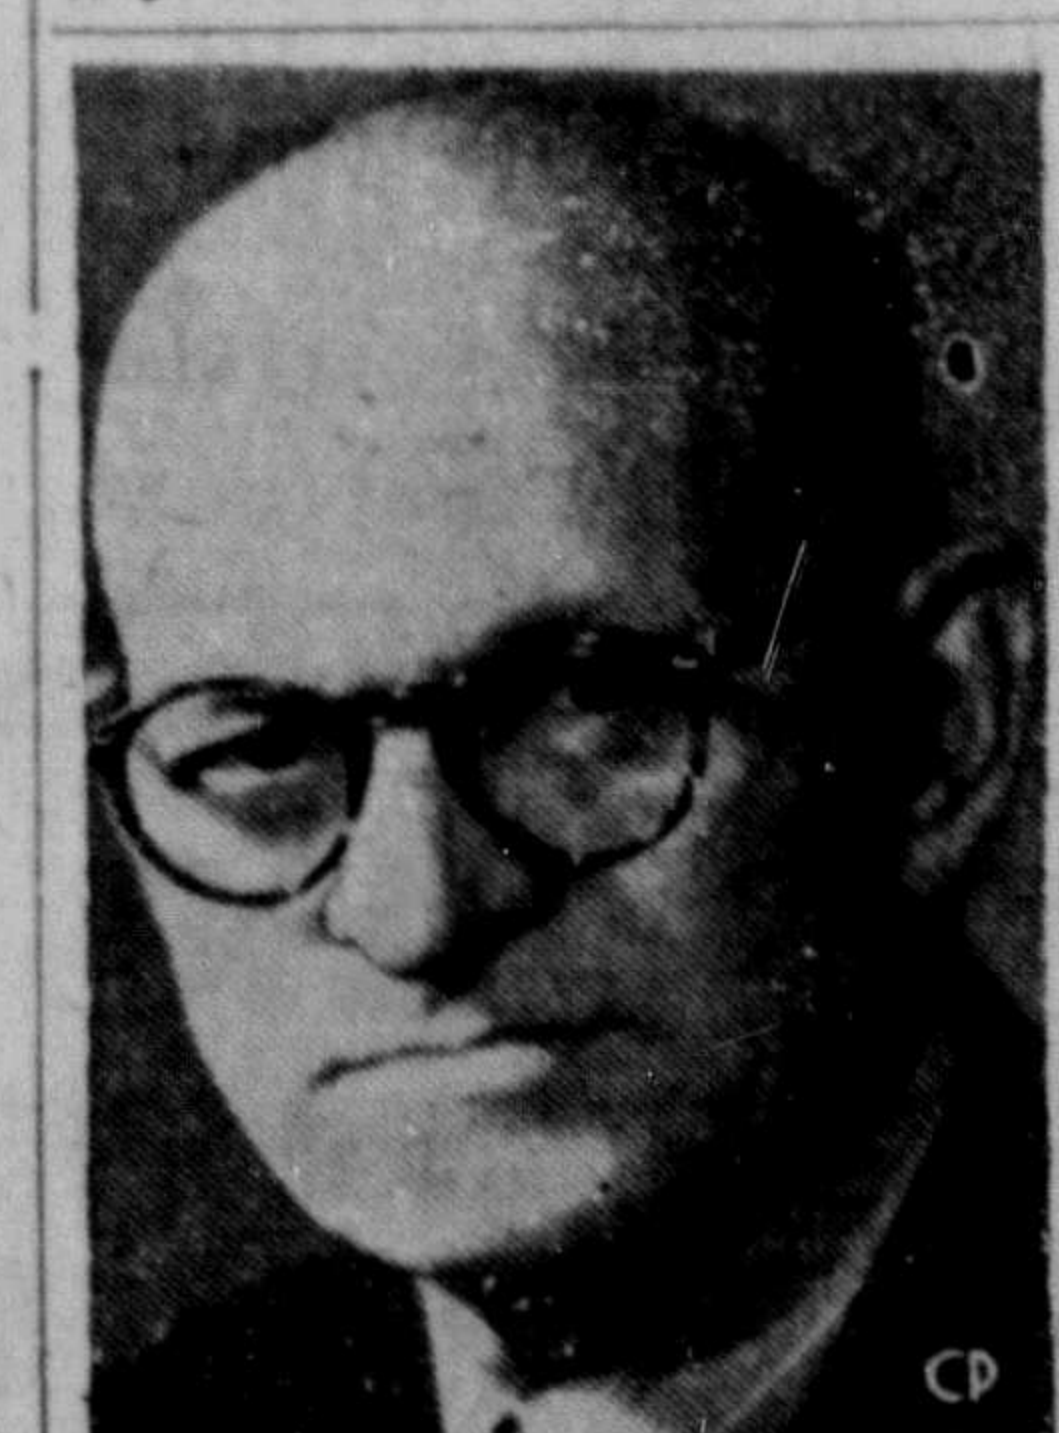

Eric Faure, chairman of the flood relief committee heading the drive, called all women canvassers off the streets when notified of Miss King's experience.

"But we are continuing the canvass during the day, although we had hoped to wind it up last night," said Mr. Faure.

Total receipts of the flood relief fund added to $1,734.18 last night, as reported by Harry Scholten, secretary-treasurer.

Today, a sale of Dutch home-cooking in the former Bulkley Market store on Third Avenue reported brisk business as ladies dressed in the national costume of the Netherlands began serving the public early in the day. Receipts from the sale will be added to the fund. Further contributions will be received at the office of Dybbavn & Hanson, Third Avenue.

On Sunday, the Kinsmen Club will canvass section 2 of the city.

Halibut Season Opens May 17
Recommended by Commission

SEATTLE.—The International Fisheries Commission reported Friday it has recommended that the halibut season begin May 17. Regulations for the 1953 season will be made after the dates have been approved by the U.S. and Canadian governments.

Recommendations are that the season be opened May 17 in four areas: 1A, which is south of Cape Blanco, Ore.; 1B, between Cape Blanco and Willapa Bay, Wash.; 2A, between Willapa Bay and Cape Spencer, Alaska, with exception of southern Hecate Strait, B.C.; and the Forrester Island region of southeastern Alaska; 3A, from Cape Spencer to Sanak Island.

It was recommended that a 10-day season, beginning July 31, be established in areas 2B, southern Hecate Strait, and 2C, Forrester Island region.

Sports Show
In Toronto
Opening Soon

TORONTO.—Arrangements are practically complete for the 1953 Canadian National Sportsmen's Show to be held in the Coliseum, Toronto, March 13 to 21 under the auspices of the Toronto Anglers' and Hunters' Association in the interest of conservation.

Judging by the large number of commercial exhibitors who have taken space, the new acts and entertainment in our stage and water revue and the advance inquiries for tickets, the 1953 show should surpass all our previous efforts, says Frank Kortright, TAHA president.

Profits from the Sportsmen's Show will be used to carry on a varied program to conserve natural resources of forest, field and stream.

Since the first Sportsmen's Show was held in 1948, the association has carried out an extensive conservation program and, at the same time, has financed a number of conservation projects undertaken by other organizations.

Among highlights of the 1953 show will be displays of boats, motors, cottages, a conservation display and two dog shows. There will be bowling demonstrations and competitions, a demonstration area where sports such as tennis, badminton, golf, boxing, fencing, and archery will be demonstrated by experts and champions, a casting pool, square dancing and other attractions.

'Road' Actors Fined For Indecent Show

VANCOUVER (CP)—The final act was played in city police court Friday when six members of Everyman repertory theatre company were convicted of staging an indecent play.

The play was Erskine Caldwell's "Tobacco Road," a tale of southern sharecroppers staged at the Avon Theatre here three weeks ago.

Sidney Risk, producer, was acquitted because the charge, said Magistrate W. W. B. McInnes, does not act in connection with this matter.

Theatre owner Charles Nelson was fined $50 for permitting an indecent show.

Magistrate McInnes told the actors, the producer and the owner that he found the play was produced to satisfy audiences who came to see filth.

Convicted and fined $20 or 10 days in jail, the maximum sentence, were Tamara Delugo, Doug Haskins, Edward Babcock, Douglas Heller, Louise De Vick, members of the cast, and Dorothy Davies, director.

Defence counsel Thomas Dohm announced he would appeal.

"I say the vast majority of the audience went to the theatre on account of the filth of the play and to see the filth," Magistrate McInnes said.

"And they got value for their money."

"The play was, in my opinion, indecent, immoral and obscene."

Low Prices Force
Silbak Shut-Down

Two hundred and sixty miners have been given notice that the largest producing mine in northern British Columbia is going to close down because of lack of finances to carry on production.

Employees of Silbak Premier Ltd., the 33-year-old mine near Stewart, B.C., and main industry in the area, received notice that the mine and mill will close down immediately.

About 40 employees were let go immediately when the announcement was made by Dale Pitt, managing director, earlier this week.

Mr. Pitt told employees, in notices posted throughout the large Premier Mine holdings, that "it is with great regret that the directors... are forced by economic conditions beyond their control to discontinue operation of the Silbak property."

FALL IN PRICES

"The drastic fall in the price of base metals produced at Premier, combined with rising costs of production have resulted in heavy losses to the company this past year," the notice says.

"Reserves which the company had in its treasury at the beginning of 1952 have been used to meet operating losses sustained during the year, and are now without sufficient working capital to continue operation."

"All development and ore breaking in Silbak and border ground will be discontinued immediately and all men engaged in this work will be laid off within a day or two."

The village of Stewart received the news with shock as it witnessed its biggest industry go under after 33 years of continual operation except for the 1947 strike period.

The only other industry now operating within the vicinity is Western Woods, a logging company supplying pulp logs to Columbia Cellulose Company Ltd. at Watson Island.

The Premier mine up until now had been milling 400 tons or ore daily. Its operations also include the Indian Mines, a nearby base metal property which has also been closed down.

2 Rabies Cases

VICTORIA (CP)—Two cases of rabies in animals have been reported in British Columbia in the last three weeks, Agriculture Minister Kenneth Kiernan said Wednesday.

In a return filed in the Legislature for L. L. King (SC—Fort George), Mr. Kiernan said the cases occurred in a wolf and a fox in the northern Fort Nelson district.

Socreds
Favor Old Party Plan

VICTORIA (CP)—Several Social Crediters indicated Friday in the Legislature that they favor a policy avowed by Social Credit in Alberta 18 years ago.

Randolph Harding (CCF—Kaslo-Slocan), speaking in the throne speech debate, leaned across his desk at one point and asked the Social Credit government benches:

"Are you in favor of a policy of issuing dividends?"

He was answered with a chorus of "Yes's" from the cabinet seats.

Mr. Harding was referring to an old slogan of the Alberta Social Credit part in 1935 that each Albertan would get $25 a month from the government. The policy was never implemented.

Other speakers in the debate were P. A. Gibbs (L—Victoria), and John Squire (CCF—Alberni). The debate, in which no Social Credit members are participating, continues Monday.

Mr. Gibbs said other provinces are obviously contributing to B.C.'s welfare. He referred to newspaper reports that the federal government collected $239,000,000 in taxes from B.C. in the last fiscal year and that B.C. is getting in return $41,000,000 under the Dominion-provincial tax rental agreement.

Mr. Gibbs said that in the last fiscal year the federal government spent $262,500,000 in B.C., or $23,000,000 more than it collected in taxes from the province.

"Obviously, Alberta, Ontario or Quebec are contributing to the B.C. welfare, and now it is proposed to beg some more from those provinces, possibly money that should go to the poorer provinces," he said.

FLUFFY, the family cat, is credited with saving the life of Jimmy, seven-month-old son of Mrs. Charles Gledhill of Cornwall, Ont. Fluffy set up such a racket in the basement one night that Mrs. Gledhill got up to investigate. On her way downstairs she glanced into her baby's room and found Jimmy was almost strangled in the bedclothes. When the baby was safe, the cat became quiet.

Aid For The Handicapped

IN MANY Canadian families, some member is crippled or otherwise incapacitated and dependent. A pension for those who cannot earn a living is the subject of resolutions put on the House of Commons order paper by two members. Rev. Dan Melvor's motion and a similar one by John Sinnott ask the government to consider co-operating with the provinces in this matter. Though their intention will evoke much public sympathy, the problem of the handicapped cannot be dealt with simply by paying pensions.

A large number of the incapacitated are now aided by workmen's compensation, mothers' allowances, or the pensions for veterans, the blind and the aged. For those without other resources, Ontario's Legislature this year authorized a total disability pension. For those who can make some recovery and earn their own living, a good deal of assistance is already available.

Crippled children are among the unfortunates who are helped by National Health Program grants. Some handicapped persons are benefiting from the Canadian Vocational Training Program grants toward the cost of training courses in the provinces. More than 14,000 of them were placed in jobs last year by special placement officers of the National Employment Service. Provincially, compensation boards maintain rehabilitation centres. Saskatchewan has a complete program for the handicapped—from medical care, through vocational training, to placement, with allowances for living, transportation, clothing and tuition.

As the result of a National Conference on Rehabilitation in February, 1951, a federal-provincial program for the handicapped is taking shape, with a National Advisory Committee and a national co-ordinator, Ian Campbell. The provinces are forming central committees to work with Ottawa.

In the end, all provinces may have health insurance programs through which the disabled can be identified, and all may be paying disability pensions. The federal government could assist by expanding its employment service staff and concentrating attention on the handicapped as a special category in the Canadian Vocational Training Act. It has been asked by the National Advisory Committee to offer rehabilitation grants to the provinces. All in all, substantial progress is being made.

OTTAWA DIARY

By NORMAN M. MacLEOD

Next week's budget is expected confidently to be of the "sunshine" variety. The only question is whether the "sunshine" will be of warm summer strength or just a more temperate glow. If Liberal MPs have their way, it will be definitely of the mid-summer variety.

Government supporters have no delusions concerning the uncertain temper of the nation's voters. They realize that their political future is doubtful at best. And they want everything possible done to improve the situation between now and election day.

The reason for their extreme anxiety is a relatively new one to federal politics. A considerable number of the Liberal MPs came into the House for the first time in the 1945 election. That makes the coming election a crucial one for them. If they can survive it, they qualify for the $3,000 per year pension which the MPs have provided for themselves. None of them want to miss out on that. It's undoubtedly the strongest single motive dominating the collective mind of Parliament in the present situation.

CHEAPER DRINKS

It is taken for granted that one of the popularity moves in next week's taxation changes will be a cut in the income tax, notably in the low and middle brackets. There is also a confident anticipation that the tobacco levy will be slashed and that smokes will become cheaper. Now the latest addition to the prophecy list is a reduction in the tax on alcoholic beverages.

The rumor is that both beer and spirits are to be affected. The brewers have been active over recent weeks in presenting their case for consideration to the government. The profit margin in their business has come uncomfortably close to the vanishing point at present prices. And they contend that beer prices cannot be raised without placing the beverage in the luxury class. That obviously wouldn't be a popular result with the public. And the government has the shrewd suspicion that it would suffer at least equally with the brewers in any loss.

The situation with respect to hard liquor is every stronger. Not only are consumers of spirits the most heavily taxed group in the nation, not even excepting cigarette smokers. In addition, they are made to pay for a liberally diluted product. Back during World War II the late Prime Minister Mackenzie King reduced the legal strength of alcoholic beverages from 47.6 to 70 per cent. It was supposed to be a wartime concession to the "drys." But it has never been rescinded. It is unlikely that anything will be done to restore the potency of hard liquor in the coming budget. But consumers are pretty certain to get some "break" in taxation.

Lady Peace Angel

IT IS ONE of the tragic consequences of the great divide in Christendom that we Protestants know so little of what really goes on in the other half.

A Catholic lady recently mailed me a book which tells a fascinating and, I believe, true story, about which I am sorry to say I had never previously heard or read a word, except that some said "the sun had danced in the sky" in Portugal.

The book was "Russia Will Be Converted" by John W. Haffert, published by AMI International Press, U.S. price $3.

It tells a story of a modern miracle, like that which took place when shepherds watched their flocks by night near Bethlehem. Here is the story, stripped of what I would call (I sincerely trust without offence) subsequent Catholic propaganda:

IN FATIMA, Portugal in 1915 there lived three little girl cousins who played and laughed and talked as they minded the family sheep. One day they came home and told their parents that they had seen a shining young man angel, who told them they would later be visited from another messenger from heaven. Their families scolded them, and they were sorry they had ever mentioned the vision.

But on May 13, 1917, they were suddenly alarmed when strange sounds in the sky made them fear a storm, even at that bright noon.

A beautiful lady angel appeared who told them she would make seven special visits to earth—six in that year, each on the thirteenth day of the month.

This time the parents of the three girls—Lucia Santos and Francisca and Jacinta Marto, did believe their children. The news spread over the country by word of mouth. On each thirteenth of the month increasing crowds gathered at the appointed spot. By October 13 a vast multitude of one hundred thousand had assembled.

Meanwhile the authorities had briefly arrested the children to try to make them admit the story a fake—but without success. In the appearance the lady angel declared that she had been sent on a special mission concerning Russia. The last visit was less than a month before the Bolshevik coup in the "ten days which shook the world."

THE LADY angel made it clear that she was on earth on a mission of peace. The (first) world war would end she said, and soldiers would soon return to their homes.

"Let them offend our Lord God no more," she said, "for He is already much offended."

Events were about to take place in Russia, said the angel lady, which could eventually create a world crisis of terrible proportions. Whole nations might be annihilated, she said. But if the people who heard her message, then or later, would follow certain rules "Russia will be converted, and there will be peace."

The rules were for God-trusting people to pray earnestly every day.

IN HIS book Mr. Haffert addresses himself to Protestants and Jews as well as to his fellow Roman Catholics. He profoundly believes that the lady angel of 1917 had to manifest in a particularly Catholic member because the key spiritual battleground was destined to be Europe, where Catholics are the vast majority. He speculates how even Stalin might be personally converted—but is sure in any event that Russia will be.

UNDER OUR ROOF

By JOHN STURDY

Yesterday this letter arrived from Hollywood. It was written under the imposing letterhead of Colossal Pictures Inc., Colossal City, Cal., and it was with some surprise that I read the following:

"Dear Sir:
On instructions from Mr. Manny Max, president of our studio, I am enclosing railroad tickets reading Vancouver-Hollywood, for you, your personal representative, your public relations officer and your valet. We will expect you on the 10th instant, and please leave the train at Glendale Station as you will be met there by a studio car. Mr. Max is looking forward to seeing you again. Yours very truly, Sylvia Sonotone, Secretary to Mr. Max."

I looked at my wife, who had been reading over my shoulder. In the meantime a great mass of railroad tickets had fallen to the floor.

"This is crazy," I said. "Crazy or not," my wife said, "it obviously means that Colossal Pictures wants you in Hollywood. You have done work for Colossal before, haven't you?"

"Yes," I admitted. "I have written one or two epics for them, but Manny Max has certainly made a mistake this time. You're my wife and you ought to know that I don't possess a personal representative, or a public relations officer, or a valet. Especially a valet. I had better get on the long distance phone and straighten out the matter."

"You will do nothing of the sort," my wife said. "You'll take one of these tickets and get down to Hollywood as fast as you can and report to Colossal Pictures. I need a new fur coat."

We were talking in the shed, of course, where we are living on account of all our guests in the main house, and I had to admit that there was some logic in what my wife said. Why the great Manny Max had suddenly sent me a lot of railroad tickets didn't make sense; but then, a lot of things that happen in Hollywood never do.

So I went over to the house to get some of the things that I needed for my trip, and in the living-room I discovered our guests playing bingo. There was Hamish, of course, and Little Augie, the blind-pig king (things are looking pretty rough for Little Augie these days, what with cocktail bars on the horizon) and Col. S. Skeffington-Smuts (Ret.) and his wife, the former Anastasia Wiggs-Wiggs.

"Pardon me," I said. "You don't mind me walking through my own living-room?"

"Any time, old boy," the Colonel said cordially. "Any time at all."

"What's on your mind, pal?" enquired Little Augie.

"I am on my way to pack," I said. "I am going to Hollywood."

Well, early this morning I called a taxi from the village, preparatory to catching the boat for Vancouver, and I kissed my wife and my small son good-bye at the door of the shed, and then I turned—and walked straight into Hamish and Little Augie and the Colonel.

All three of them were carrying suitcases.

"What is the idea?" I demanded.

"We are going with you," said Hamish.

"I am your personal representative," said the Colonel.

"I am your public relations officer," said Little Augie.

"And I am your valet," added Hamish.

"No!" I shouted. "No, no, no!" The Colonel shook his finger at me. "Calm down, dear boy," he said. "You know how afraid you are of telephones. And living so far from the house, too—we didn't want to disturb you when this Max fellow telephoned from Hollywood. He wanted you to write a movie script. Well, naturally those Hollywood producers have to be impressed. So I told him that you simply couldn't consider the assignment unless your personal representative went with you, and your public relations officer, and of course your valet. I added that you would fly to Hollywood in your personal plane, only you were subject to airsickness."

I trembled. "What did he say?" He said he knew how you felt. He is troubled with airsickness too. So he said he would send the railroad tickets. He was very impressed, and wondered if you would accept twice your previous salary. I told him we would discuss the matter."

"Here's the taxi," said Hamish. I looked back at my wife. She was stroking her arm. "Mink," she was murmuring. "At least mink."

See you in Hollywood next week.

Call of The Yukon Turns From Gold to Hydro Power

By FORBES RHUDE
Canadian Press Business Editor

The siren voice of the Yukon, which once lured the gold-seekers of the world, now calls as irresistibly to the seekers of hydro power.

The territory's tumultuous mountain streams are catching the ears of industrialists in a manner which seems to indicate that a relatively few years will find them harnessed to turbines.

Most recent indication of this was at Tuesday's annual meeting of Frohisher, Ltd., big Canadian exploration and development company with mining interests across Canada and in Africa and South America.

Two quotations, in particular, from the address of Thayer Lindsley, president, have caught attention. One said:

"One of the purposes to which funds will be devoted is a survey of the water power resources of a part of the Yukon territory. This survey is being carried on under a permit from the director of water power under the Dominion water power regulations."

"It is hoped that within 10 months a full picture of the potential water power resources of the area will be obtained and also an estimate made of the metallurgical uses to which such power can be put in connection with the expansion of the activities of Quebec Metallurgical Industries, Ltd."

The other quotation: "Now that we have acquired interest in well-selected ore deposits in various parts of the world all of which are capable of ample production, it behooves us to consider sources of cheap hydro power to process them."

Last August Aluminum Company of America sought a concession from Canada to build a dam on the Elsie River, south of the Yukon, to develop aluminum development. The request was turned down by the Canadian government.

Frohisher is not the only company interested in the Yukon's water power. Reports forecast step-by-step development of the Yukon's own mineral resources, processing with its own power.

The Financial Post asks this week concerning Frohisher's announcement: "Is this the forecast of the largest hydro power developments in the Canadian North? The implications could mean a change in the economic Yukon."

Major James Martin, the nationalist turned evangelist is still conducting meetings at the Salvation Army Citadel here.

2 Chosen from Chatham For Visit to Coronation

Two of HMCS Chatham's Navy personnel have been selected to represent their unit at the Coronation ceremonies of Queen Elizabeth II in London on June 2.

Chosen are Seaman Eddie Dawes and Wren Eileen Trapp. Their names have been sent to naval headquarters at Ottawa following a signal received Monday requesting two to be chosen from the Prince Rupert reserve unit.

Final announcement of 29 men and 11 wrens of the entire Canadian Naval Reserve selected to go to London will be made at drill a week from next Monday.

The trip will be of two-months duration, including a week's leave while in England.

Sid Alexander, Pete Peterac, and Howard Lavigne have returned from training down south. All three took the AA gunners course, and having passed, they will be promoted to leading seamen Monday night. The same night, Lieutenants Ned McLeod and Carl Smith will be presented with the Canadian Forces Decoration, for long and meritorious service.

Two most recent Chatham recruits have signed up with the WINCHESTER, England (CP)—A compulsory silence period as a form of punishment for juvenile offenders, is advocated by Col. J. B. Scott, chairman of the Hampshire police authority.

Addressing a gathering of county magistrates, Col. Scott suggested his "don't talk" proposal should be tested as a deterrent to young boys convicted of theft.

"There was never a time when stealing was less justified than it is today," he said, "and magistrates should get tougher in dealing with those guilty of this crime."

Col. Scott suggested that Saturday afternoon silence sessions should be held in police stations and courtrooms. Youngsters to be punished would be required to concentrate for three hours or so on the study of some technical subject.

During that period they would not be allowed to talk.

RCN, Ordinary Seamen Cecil and Roberts have gone to Cornwallis and new entry training. They hope to go into the Quarter-master, or Seaman's branch.

Lieutenant Commander Pearson, staff officer at Chatham, visited the High School Friday giving a talk on the Navy to the students. To most it was a surprise to learn that the Navy was more than just a fighting force, that it also operated weather ships in the Atlantic and Pacific, does hydrographic survey work in Arctic waters; and generally works at many things other than wartime gunnery and radar.

Outstanding Canadian Sings to Small Group

Perhaps the most outstanding singing performance yet heard in Prince Rupert last night drew one of the smallest audiences to attend an Alaska Music Trail concert.

James Milligan, accompanied by Mrs. Milligan on the piano, thrilled his listeners time and again with his versatile talent in song, portrayed in a deep, rich baritone which was beautiful in range and accurate in control.

But what overwhelmed his responsive audience most was the practically unlimited volume with which the youthful artist could shake the rafters, yet drop to soft notes scarcely above a whisper, though clear as a bell.

The poise and composure of this young man, who looks considerably more mature than his 23 years would imply also struck the enthusiastic crowd.

The program of music left little to be desired and was well calculated to demonstrate the quality of voice and such outstanding talent of the youthful Canadian.

For his opening selections, Milligan chose such religious themes as "Trust in the Lord" by Bach, and Mendelssohn's "It is Enough."

Comedy interspersed drama with such selections as Durante's "Danza, Danza..."

Probably the most dramatic rendition offered by Milligan was the "Credo" by Verdi with which he recreated remarkably the atmosphere described in song and words by the Italian composer.

Milligan also won his way into the hearts of those who preferred a lighter type of song with his virile renditions of negro spirituals, "Water Boy," "Deep River," and "Joshua Fit the Battle of Jericho."

He completed his program with the plaintive "None but the Lonely Heart," the robust love song, "Hills of Gruze," and the laughter-raising "Song of the Flea."

In his encore, Milligan anticipated his audience's desire to hear "Old Man River" for a climax in crescendo and a grand finale.

Mrs. Milligan displayed her talent at the piano with being in complete sympathy at all times with the artist.

The husband-wife team was furthermore outstandingly characterized as Canadian.

B.C.'s Hospital Plan Run Better by Socreds

VICTORIA (CP)—British Columbia's new Social Credit government is trying to show that it is doing a better job than previous administrations in running the province's compulsory hospital insurance scheme.

Hospital insurance, probably the hottest political issue in B.C. in the last decade, was introduced in 1949 by the Liberal-Progressive Conservative coalition government. The Liberals were in power alone last year until Social Credit took office Aug. 1.

For hospital care, married couples now pay $39 and single persons $27 annually, whether or not they are sick. In addition, they pay $1 a day for each day spent in hospital.

Basically, the scheme is the same as when it started, though premium rates and extra charges have changed every year. Today, nearly 380,000 persons are paying around $15,000,000 a year into the scheme.

RUNNING SMOOTHLY

Social Credit claims it now has the scheme running more smoothly than at any previous time but the opposition contends it is merely reaping the fruits of the necessary trial-and-error methods of previous governments. Tom Uphill, labor member for Fernie, said in the current Legislature that Douglas Turnbull, Liberal health minister, had tried to make hospital insurance pay its own way instead of making up deficits from the newly-tried scheme from general revenue.

Since 1949, the government has made special grants totalling $11,000,000 to keep the scheme out of the red. Revenue for the first four years was around $75,000,000 but costs ran $11,000,000 beyond that.

There are 67 hospitals in the province which come under the scheme. The government collects revenue and allots it to the hospitals according to number of beds, patients and so on.

Health Minister Eric Martin reports that fewer hospitals reported deficits last year—in the five months when Social Credit was in power—than in 1951.

He said that of the 67 hospitals, 19 reported deficits totalling $135,000 in 1952. Forty-eight broke even or had surpluses totalling $710,000.

In 1951, he said, 27 hospitals had deficits totalling $360,000 while 40 broke even or had surpluses amounting to $74,000.

PREMIUMS UP

In another returned filed Monday in the House, Mr. Martin said premium receipts for the 10 months ending Jan. 31 were $13,157,365 compared to $13,040,801 in the 10 months ending Jan. 31, 1952.

Last year, Social Credit said it would not force persons who had never joined the scheme to pay arrears if they paid the current premium—$39 if married, $27 if single—for insurance coverage. Mr. Martin said 1,736 persons have taken advantage of this.

(A person who does not pay the premiums is charged the full daily rate in hospitals, which can be as high as $16. A person can also be halled into court for refusal to pay premiums, but this has not been done for about a year.)

A team of management engineers investigated administration of the Hospital Insurance Service at the request of the coalition government. The report of Stevenson and Kellogg, finally tabled in the Legislature last week, suggested how administration could be overhauled to save $1,035,000 a year and cut staff from 665 to 223.

CUTTING STAFF

Mr. Martin said the government has cut the staff by 10 or 12 employees and saved between $20,000 and $25,000. He also indicated the staff has been reduced by another 150 by not replacing those who retire or go to other jobs.

The 1952 report of the service shows that a smaller percentage of persons entering hospital is covered by insurance now than in 1949. In the first year of operation, 86.2 per cent of persons entering hospital were covered by the plan. Last year, the percentage had dropped to 82.9 per cent. A total of 216,367 persons, including new-born babies, went to hospital in 1952 and 179,366 were covered by the insurance scheme.

However, insurance officials say that actually about 90 per cent of the province's population is covered. They say that percentages based on the number entering hospital are misleading because since 1949 more persons have become exempt from premium payments and many more tourists enter hospital in B.C. and pay the full daily rate.

BLACKWOOD on Bridge

by EASLEY BLACKWOOD

Miss Brash Has Timing To Match Muzzy's Lead

Mr. Muzzy made the brilliant lead of the ace of spades against Miss Brash's five diamond contract. Miss Brash ruffed it low, but still had to time the hand right to make 11 tricks.

Of course trumps had to be pulled sometime but she decided it was too early for that. Figuring the bidding and the distribution of her own hand, it was rather unlikely that the two minor suits would break evenly.

However, if one opponent had all five of the outstanding diamonds, it was remote that the hand could be made anyway, so at trick two Miss Brash laid down the ace of diamonds. She was not too pleased when Mrs. Keen played the queen.

She now led dummy's ace of clubs, cashed the king of spades and got rid of one of her losing hearts. Next she led dummy's last diamond.

If Mrs. Keen had ruffed in here, she could have cashed a heart trick but Miss Brash could then have won any lead, picked up the remaining trumps and spread her hand.

Instead of ruffing the second diamond, Mrs. Keen discarded a spade. Miss Brash won with the king of diamonds, led a small diamond and ruffed in dummy with the nine of clubs. She then led dummy's last club, picked up Mrs. Keen's trumps and claimed the balance.

If she had led as many as two rounds of trumps at the beginning of the hand she would have gone set. In other words, after ruffing a third lead of diamonds, she could not have re-entered her hand except by ruffing a spade or a heart and in doing that she would have reduced her trumps to one less than the trumps held by Mrs. Keen. She timed her hand to take care of a 4-1 trump break.

Masset To Get Anchorage In Dredging of Delkatla

One of the greatest obstacles badgering fishermen in the northern Queen Charlotte Islands area will be removed with the proposed dredging of Delkatla Slough at Masset.

The federal department of public works has called for tenders for the project, estimated to cost in the vicinity of $280,000.

Dredging of the tidal slough which leads off Masset Inlet will create a channel 2,340 feet long by a width of from 100 to 250 feet. Average depth will be about eight feet, six feet below low tide level.

Five existing floats will be moored temporarily.

This information was received in Prince Rupert by Doug Frizell from E. T. Applewhite, MP for Skeena.

Dredging of Delkatla Slough is of utmost importance to Masset fishermen for it will provide them with safe anchorage for their boats, a facility which is now non-existent within a radius of many miles from the northern QCI settlement.

Both Old and New Masset, situated across the slough from each other, are located on the rocky shores of Masset Inlet, battered by strong tide rips and exposed to heavy winds.

Fishermen either tie their boats to the pier where they are buffeted and damaged by weather and tide, or take them in high water into the slough where they sit in the mud more than half of the time.

Creation of the anchorage there will accommodate about 200 local vessels and many more during the height of the fishing season.

It is also expected to increase the fisheries of the locale, by attracting more vessels there during season.

The $18,000 redecking project at the government wharf on Prince Rupert's waterfront is nearing completion.

Old decking as well as joists of the dock were torn up and replaced with cedar timbers obtained from neighborhood hills.

Cow Bay fishermen's floats, buffeted by high seas and deterioration with age, are falling apart. Fishermen don't expect the floats to hold out until spring. These floats are used mainly by gillnetters and seiners and offer the only such facility within a mile from waterfront centre.

Request has been made to city council to contact government authorities to repair or rebuild the floats.

SCREEN ★ FLASHES

Loretta Young and Jeff Chandler will be seen in a touching and tender drama in Universal-International's "Because of You," which opens Monday at the Capitol.

Alex Nicol and Frances Dee head the film's strong supporting cast.

In this story of a great love, Miss Young comes through with the most deeply emotional portrayal of her career. As the unwitting accomplice in a crime for which she serves a prison term, then falls in love and begins to build a new life, Miss Young reaches new heights in dramatic power.

It remains, however, for Jeff Chandler to turn in the surprise performance of the season. Until now Chandler has been seen in action films as the daring swashbuckler in period costumes or as an Indian chief or war hero. In "Because of You," as an ex-air force major and husband of Loretta Young, he registers outstandingly in an emotional role.

Chandler fans will discover him just as handsome and just as forceful in street clothes as they have found him heretofore in the dress of the movie thriller.

A man to watch in this engrossing drama is Alex Nicol, who plays the "heavy." As the ex-convict who forces Miss Young into crime against her will, Nicol does a thorough job of portraying one of the worst heels on the screen with a maximum of claim. One of the upcoming stars on Universal-International's ever-growing contract list, Nicol is an actor worthy of watching.
