The Reds poured a division or more into the three-day-old battle for two outpost hills 40 miles due north of the capital. Meanwhile, the Allies today asked the Reds to agree immediately to a date for signing a truce, indicating they were either persuaded rebellious President Syngman Rhee to agree to an armistice or have decided to go ahead without his approval.

Chinese Reds Rip Through NOK Positions

Gen. Mark Clark, United Nations commander, told the Reds a letter delivered at Panmunjom that the UN command will enforce the truce terms "to the limit of possibility."

Great Flood Recedes In Japan

Hills Predicts CCF to Get 20 of 48 Seats in House

A major upset in B.C.'s provincial election result—which has not yet been decided—was forecast today by a Prince Rupert candidate, George Hills, CCF.

The CCF will claim 20 seats and the Social Credit 23 seats when the second counting of ballots in the B.C. provincial election, which begins tomorrow, is completed, said Mr. Hills.

To date, Social Credit have elected three and are leading in 27 seats; CCF have elected one and are leading in 16.

The CCF candidate and last year's MLA also gives himself a "very good winning chance" over Bruce Brown, Liberal candidate.

Hills leads Brown by 110 votes. Third candidate Bill Murray, Social Credit, is behind Brown by 166 votes.

In every B.C. riding, the absentee ballots will be counted first, beginning at 9 a.m. tomorrow, for No. 1 choices. When these votes have been added to those already tabulated for the candidates, those receiving 50 per cent, plus one, votes will be declared elected.

For the balance of the candidates, second and other choice votes will be counted and distributed until a winner is decided. In Prince Rupert, just over 600 absentee ballots will be counted.

DEPENDS ON ABSENTEES
Mr. Hills, who volunteered his predictions, said his own winning chance will depend on the first

Workmen on Job Throughout Night

Wire communication systems in and out of Prince Rupert—dead for 12 hours—were restored at noon today after having been knocked out at 11:47 p.m. Sunday.

A dead tree crashing down the mountainside 25 miles east of here near Haysport railway station severed all wires, completely cutting off the city from the rest of the world.

Linemen reported that the huge tree, a dogwood, took with it a pole and cut all wires which carry telegraph, teletype, telephone and CBC radio lines.

Service was restored after a crew of linemen worked continuously for 12 hours.

At the telegraph office, where lines were restored shortly before noon, all morning traffic of several hundred messages and Canadian Press wires were held up.

The telephone exchange here got the first recovered wire at 9:30 a.m. when long distance operators quoted an hour delay.

Radio-telephone, used as an alternative to land lines, also was unserviceable. CBC lines were restored in time for the 12:15 news broadcast.

No damage to the railroad, which runs parallel to the lines, was reported.

Three Escape Injury in Car Plunge

Three city people miraculously escaped injury Saturday night when the car in which they were riding plunged more than 75 feet down a rock bluff six miles east of Terrace.

The three were Marjorie Way, Herbert Braun and Ronald Michael, all of Prince Rupert.

The car, owned by Herbert Braun, was proceeding toward Terrace when it struck a soft shoulder on a corner and slid off the rock bluff. It plunged more than 75 feet over the rocks before overturning and coming to rest on its side against a tree.

All three climbed out of the car with only minor scratches and bruises. The trio were returning to Terrace from Kleanza Creek.

The car was seriously damaged.

Nelson's Descendant Sees Early Likelihood Of Space-Ship Travel, Brainy Life on Mars

ARMAGH, Northern Ireland (Reuters)—The sixth Earl Nelson, a descendant of Admiral Lord Nelson, spoke here about ships—but ships of a much different kind to those his famed ancestor sailed 150 years ago.

The present Lord Nelson's interest is space ships and trips to the planet Mars. The Earl said at Armagh University:

"And there is no valid reason why it should not have started on Mars long before it began here, nor why it should not have reached a higher stage of development than anything we know."

Nelson said that even if life does not exist on Mars, it could have done so in the past. The rarefied Martian atmosphere would not be capable of supporting life as it is known here. Animal life might have developed along insect lines—brainy, efficient insects that might have "really constructed vast engineering works such as the Martian canals."

The next good look astronomers will be able to get of Mars will be in 1956, when the planet's eccentric orbit will bring it into a favorable position. Mars is the earth's closest planet neighbor, being 34,000,000 to 63,000,000 miles away, depending on the time of the year.

As district freight agent here Mr. Kemp has jurisdiction over the territory from here to Jasper, and along the Pacific coast extending into Alaska.

He arrived here just prior to Mr. Collinson's departure aboard the Prince George last Friday night. He expects to bring his wife and three children here as soon as he finds a home.

Grooming a Leader

ALL THE EXCUSES advanced for the resignation of Harold Winch last March were just so much talk. Most of the ballyhoo that followed his "exit" from politics stressed that he was ill and intended to retire.

Now he's the CCF candidate in Vancouver East and he's almost certain to be elected.

When he quit provincial affairs, suddenly, dramatically, last March, he no doubt had the idea in the back of his mind that he'd like to sit in the House of Commons.

Is he being groomed for national leadership of the CCF? Some people think so. But Mr. Coldwell is solidly entrenched and would dearly love to be the Prime Minister of Canada. However, the CCF has always looked far ahead and such vision has paid good dividends.

Mr. Coldwell is 65 years old now. If the CCF doesn't form the government after the August election (and it's chances are none too good) Mr. Coldwell won't have a chance again to be Prime Minister until he's 70.

Actually there won't be much chance in 1957, either. Perhaps in 1961. But Mr. Coldwell will be 75 then. Harold Winch, on the other hand, 10 years from now will be only 55—the prime of life for a political leader.

Harold Winch certainly isn't out gunning for Mr. Coldwell's job. But somebody has to be trained and who is more able and efficient and spectacular than Mr. Winch, with his 20 years of B.C. legislative life behind him.

The CCF, nationally, is short of leadership material. And Harold Winch is already, more or less, a national figure. If he gets elected in August, he's bound to go far in the highest councils of the CCF and might some day be Prime Minister of Canada.

OTTAWA DIARY

By Norman M. MacLeod

The wide gap in the political arithmetic being relied upon by the two old-line parties in the current election battle is nowhere more evident than in the province of Quebec.

In this traditional Liberal stronghold of the nation PC Leader George Drew is reported authoritatively to count upon carrying a minimum of 20 seats.

But Liberal campaign headquarters insist that the Drew forces will win only one seat. It is believed that the riding which they are prepared to concede to the PC's is Three Rivers. It was held in the last Parliament by Leon Balcer, PC.

That's a discrepancy of 19 seats between the estimates of the two parties. Obviously one of them is being over-optimistic.

Conceivably a considerable element of Leader Drew's confidence rests upon the fact that the key figure in the PC Quebec organization this election is Montreal lawyer J. T. Hackett, QC. A former president of the Canadian Bar Association, "John" Hackett is a name with which to conjure in professional circles in French-speaking Canada. In addition, he is a practical politician of demonstrated competence. He won the riding of Stanstead back in the 1930 general election. Liberals concede that he could carry it again this election, except for the instruction he is understood to have been given by PC headquarters to refrain from running himself in order to give personal supervision to the general Quebec picture.

Federal political circles recognize that in John Hackett Leader Drew has enlisted the support of the most influential Conservative in the province of Quebec, outside of Union Nationale Premier Maurice Duplessis himself. But the Liberals differentiate between Hackett's undoubted personal prestige and his influence as a vote-getter on a province-wide scale. They deny his possession of any magic of mass vote-getting.

So far as Premier Duplessis is concerned, the Liberals say that there is no indication of the personal intervention on his part which unquestionably would arouse their major fears. The most the PC's claim is that the Union Nationale Premier is sympathetic. They don't pretend that he is active.

But the factor upon which the Liberals are relying mainly in the Quebec picture is the drive which Leader Drew is making for Ontario support. The effect of the strong play of the PC's to Ontario is reported to be a consolidation of the Prime Minister's French-speaking following east of the Ottawa River. It is claimed that the re-action extends into the French-speaking seats in New Brunswick.

Relics of John and Charles Wesley and other founders of Methodism are seen at Wesley's Chapel in London, England.

Rhee Real Peace Snag

ON THE EVE of the arrival in Seoul of President Eisenhower's representative, the boss of South Korea, Syngman Rhee, notified the population to turn out for a demonstration.

Dr. Rhee made it plain he expected every man, woman and child to be on hand. Meanwhile, he showed what happens to those who oppose him.

Howard Handelman cabled to the Hearst papers on June 24: "Meanwhile, Dr. Chough Pyung Ok, leader of organized Korean opposition to President Syngman Rhee's armistice stand, was hunted down and viciously beaten by 'patriots' after a mob of 500 stormed through his Seoul house in search of him.

"The mob violence flared following the appearance of posters on the streets of Seoul branding Chough as a traitor."

EARLY in 1952 a majority of the elected members of the assembly of South Korea had petitioned for something approaching western style democracy.

Dr. Rhee had them beaten up, in full view of the diplomats who had been invited to attend the public meeting.

But back in earlier years Rhee's boys went much further.

The best book so far written on the recent history of Korea is "Korea Today" by the late George M. McCune, of the U.S. State Department and University of California. It clearly records how Dr. Syngman Rhee blocked every attempt at re-union of Korea by peaceful means.

Thus on page 80: "In December 1946, Dr. Rhee, the titular head of the rightist coalition, had left Korea and had gone to the United States to secure support for the creation of an independent South Korea. In Korea his party carried on a parallel campaign and in effect blocked all constructive work of the Legislative Assembly."

WHENEVER anybody appeared on the Korean scene who looked as if he had a chance to reunite the two parts, Dr. Rhee's bully boys made short work of him.

Thus on page 87: "Terrorist bands of the right, with the apparent collusion of the Korean police, immediately began an anti-Communist campaign. Lyuh Woonhyung, former head of the Peoples Republic, was the first victim of the rein of terror. He was assassinated on July 19 on a Seoul street in broad daylight and in sight of a police box. He had been mentioned as a possible compromise candidate to head the proposed provisional government."

Again on page 98: "On December 2, 1947, Chang Duksoo, leader of the cooperation faction in the Korean Democratic party, was assassinated by a rightist police officer under circumstances which involved the Kim-Koo-Syngman Rhee opposition."

RHEE'S RECORD clearly shows that there is no hope of a unified Korea or for that matter any semblance of decency or democracy even in South Korea until the evil old man is deprived of his dictatorial power.

FOUR-YEAR-OLD ANTONIO MEDICI says he wants to make money to help his parents. His father has been ill five months. ### POLITICAL ROUNDUP

by J. K. Nesbitt

VICTORIA — Now that the Conservative party—provincially, anyway—seems dead, it's interesting to look back on its history since those tremendous days of McBride, when Toryism was in its first full flower, and to the days of Tolmie, when it blossomed again, only then, too, to start the withering disease that now has stifled it.

In between, its tides have ebbed and flowed, causing alternate hope and despair, until now there's no hope at all. The Conservative party, the first party to sweep B.C. and to hold it the longest straight run, is the first of the parties to be wiped out, as political history steers its relentless course. There have, of course, been upstart parties that blossomed weakly, and then faded, but never before in this province have we seen the death of a party that was once dominant, a vital force in public affairs. It is sad—yet it is history. It has happened before elsewhere, and it will happen again, here in B.C.

Party politics came to B.C. in 1903. That year the Conservatives of McBride won 25 of 40 seats. What jubilation there was in the Tory camp that night! There were McBride, in all his glory, the member for Dewdney; C. E. Pooley, the member for Esquimalt; T. W. Patterson, the member for The Islands; J. J. Fulton, the member for Kamloops; Price Ellison, the member for Okanagan; W. J. Bowster and R. G. Tatlow, representing Vancouver City. Their names are etched deep into our political history.

The Conservative sweep that year of first Tory victory, however, didn't touch Victoria. The capital went solidly Liberal, electing W. G. Cameron, R. L. Drury, Richard Hall and J. D. McNiven.

The Conservative tide flowed on in the election of 1907 the Conservatives elected two more members than they did in 1903. Henry Esson Young came in for Atlix; A. E. McPhillips for The Islands; D. M. Eberts for Saanich, and there again, his hair growing whiter, though he was only in his late 30s, was handsome Dick McBride, the ruler of British Columbia.

In 1912 the Conservatives went to the people expecting to win every seat in the House. It was a jolt, therefore, when they lost two seats—but they still held 40. Two Socialists were elected, but not one Liberal. If only the Conservatives could have taken those two Socialist seats!

Now it is 1916 and time for another election. Time for a change, cried the Liberals. Yes, the public agreed—let's try something new—let's try the Liberals, they're pretty revolutionary, but let's live dangerously for a while. Let's see what the fast-talking Liberals can do.

McBride had seen the writing on the wall, in 1915 left the premiership and went to London as B.C. agent-general. W. J. Bowser took over as premier. When the votes of 1916 were counted there were 37 Liberals, nine Conservatives and one Socialist. Harlan Carey Brewster was premier, Bowser the leader of the Opposition. There was no official provision for the post-

But in tiny type under the title "Addenda," some more details as follows: A few ants; here and there a mosquito; sand in your shoes; broken shells all over the rugs; earache from too much gulf water taken while sailing; tough grass to mow; damned sharks taking your bait; house won't be finished for another couple of months.

Margaret Breaks Rules May Experts

LONDON (CP)—The four-day hot race meeting, fashion-plate windup for London's debutante season, turned the royal fashion spotlight back on Princess Margaret.

This petite bachelor girl, more than a background figure during the last two years, is making a notable comeback. She's dispensed the old flair for "something different" that induced her to wear post-war ankle-length outfits before British women had fully accepted them.

Throughout the Coronation season of royal engagements, her skirts have been wider and longer than is generally fashionable at the moment. Her hats have been different to those worn by other royal women. Experts say she has broken all the rules on what should be worn by petite women.

YEARS DEEPER COLORS

It seems Princess Margaret is behind many of the dress restrictions she could not escape as a daughter of a King in her recent move from Buckingham Palace to Clarence House with the Queen Mother. She is choosing deeper colors and more outstanding styles than she wore when second in line to the throne.

Her most notable Ascot fashion was a full-skirted navy organza dress with chort-boy collar and cuffs in stiff white tulle, worn with a white panache hat and white accessories. Her fullness started from the hips.

On the first day of racing her big-brimmed hat was the lightest color in the royal box—a shade of flush-rose reminiscent of her outfit worn at the Commonwealth May garden party.

At a Blenheim Palace garden party in June, attended by Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent of Canada after he received an honorary degree at Oxford University, Princess Margaret wore an outfit that experts say broke all rules for "small women."

WIDE AND LONG

The skirt of the stiff silk dress was wide and long, the grey mink clutch-cape waist length and flared at the back. Her hat had a wide shuttle trim in front and her shoes were toeless sandals composed of three wide straps.

For the antique dealers' fair in London she wore a navy and white, wide-skirted grosgrain dress with cap sleeves and deep neckline. The neckline was lined in white and the eyelet-embroidered marguerites that formed the dress pattern were backed in white.

Most outstanding feature of this outfit was her Flemish bonnet of navy silk with close-fitting helmet brim, the soft Flemish crown suggested by a circle of pleated organza placed like a crown.

Helen Jean White Leaves For New York Honeymoon

Helen Jean White, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William White, 724 Eighth Avenue East, and Dr. Edward Dudley Keever, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Wynne Keever, 21 Clove Road, New Rochelle, New York, U.S.A., were married here last Thursday in First Presbyterian Church.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was gowned in white satin styled ballerina length, with nylon and lace overskirt, and lace bodice. A finger tip veil cascaded over a white satin Juliet cap and she carried a white Bible with a rosebud corsage and satin streamers.

Her only ornament was a beautiful pearl necklace, gift of the groom.

Mrs. J. M. Evans, matron of honor, was the bride's only attendant, and chose an orchid net gown over nylon, styled ballerina length, mohair orchid coronet, and carried a colonial bouquet of pink carnations.

Rev. Dr. E. A. Wright officiated and Mrs. E. J. Smith was organist. Mr. Jack M. Evans of Prince Rupert was best man, and Mr. E. J. Smith and Mr. Harry Johnson were ushers.

The reception was held at the bride's home, which had been decorated with summer flowers for the occasion. Guests were received by the mother of the bride wearing an aquamarine afternoon length faille with a matching off-the-face hat. She was assisted by Mrs. J. W. Eastwood in the absence of the groom's mother. Mrs. Eastwood chose a rosewood crepe dress.

The three-tier wedding cake, with dainty carnation centerpiece, was decorated by Mrs. A. Thompson.

Toast to the bride was proposed by Dr. E. A. Wright, and responded to by the groom. Mr. Jack M. Evans toasted the matron of honor.

Serviteurs were Miss Leona Derksen, and the Mesdames H. Johnson and R. Matheson.

For her going away outfit the bride chose a white and navy linen dress with white accessories and a travelling coat of blue wool check.

The couple took the Prince Rupert to Vancouver, where they will board a plane for New York. They plan to reside in Schenectady, New York.

Last of the regular weekly Moose whist drives took place Saturday at the Moose hall with 56 players in attendance.

The pool prize was decided after a cut between Mrs. George Robinson, O. K. Olsen, and Ole Stegavig, which Mrs. Robinson won. Door prize was won by G. Selvig.

Ladies in charge of the kitchen were Mrs. Holder, Mrs. Good and Mrs. Muncey.

Mona Mutch, Don Kidd Married at Cathedral

At a pretty wedding at St. Andrew's Cathedral on Saturday, Mona Audrey Mutch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Mutch, was married to Donald James Kidd, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. Kidd of Victoria.

Canon Samuel Kinley officiated at the ceremony, and the bride was given in marriage by her father.

The bride was radiant in a gown of net over white satin styled ballerina length. Her finger tip veil was held in place by a coronet. She carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses and wore an heirloom necklace which belonged in the bridegroom's family.

The bride's only attendant was Miss Phyllis Dutton whose gown was of aqua nylon with matching shoulder length veil. She carried a bouquet of pink carnations.

A reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. Leighton, 735 Fifth Avenue West, where a beautiful lace "cluny" tablecloth centred the three-tier wedding cake. The cake, baked by Mrs. Eric Franson, was decorated with a "bride and groom" and a large wedding bell was superimposed in a horseshoe with bells.

Rowland A. Knight read the many out-of-town telegrams received.

For her going-away outfit the bride chose a tangerine knitted suit, with white accessories. The couple are now enroute for their honeymoon in southern B.C. They plan to reside in Prince Rupert on their return.

HELICOPTER TO TRAVEL AS FAST AS BIG PLANES

DUESSELDORF (AP)—Professor Heinrich Focke, noted German aircraft designer, is building a new "convertible" helicopter in Brazil which will reach the same speed as conventional planes.

His former chief engineer, Karl Rode, told a meeting of the German Society for Aviation Research that Focke's helicopter will gain that speed by shifting its rotor blades in flight. He did not elaborate.

Britain's Foes of Capital Punishment To Question Hanging of Timothy Evans

LONDON (Reuters)—Was an innocent man hanged? This question thrust itself into the four-day murder trial of London clerk John Christie, who will move now into the political arena.

Opponents of capital punishment in parliament intend to raise the question again that no person should ever pay with his life for a crime, no matter how vicious. Christie confessed to strangling seven women including Betty, 19-year-old Beryl Evans, and murdered with her 14-month-old daughter Geraldine in 1949. Her truckdriver husband Timothy was hanged the following March for strangling the child.

Now many Britons were asking whether Christie killed the infant too. The small but extremely vocal band of persons opposed to capital punishment are expected to pick up the war cry in the next few weeks.

For Christie's execution, they will gather outside the prison walls, wave banners and demonstrate as they have done in all past hangings this century. Newspapers will be flooded with letters for and against the death penalty.

The new ammunition will be: "If Evans were alive today, would he be granted a new trial leading to freedom?"

Christie was chief crown witness at the Evans trial. After a series of conflicting confessions, Evans accused Christie from the witness stand of murdering his child. The charge was laughed off then as "fantastic."

At the time of the Evans trial, two of Christie's victims had already been buried in the back yard of his shabby West London home.

Asked twice during the trial this week whether he had killed anyone besides the seven women, Christie sobbed out: "I don't remember. If someone says I did, I must have."

Since Evans was found guilty of murdering his child, the charge of slaying his wife was not pursued. Christie later confessed to slaying Mrs. Evans but denied killing the baby.

Evans might still be alive if the House of Lords had not blocked a 1948 bill by the Socialist government to abolish capital punishment for an experimental, five-year period.

Chuter Ede, home secretary in the Labor government, suspended the death penalty on April 16, 1948, pending a parliamentary decision on the government's criminal justice bill. The bill went through the House of Commons but was rejected by the House of Lords.

POLITICAL ROUNDUP

tion of leader of the Opposition until 1921. Only then did he receive an extra sessional allowance. And sessional indemnities in those days were $500; today they are $3,000.

Bowster carried on for eight years as Conservative leader in the House. In 1924 he was defeated. A Conservative convention was called, elected Dr. Simon Tolmie its leader. He was a member of the House of Commons, and he remained there, not seeking a B.C. seat. Harry Pooley, carrying on the Esquimalt tradition of always a Pooley in the B.C. House, was Conservative House leader—and so leader of the Opposition.

For 12 years the Liberals ruled. Then came the election of 1938. Time for a change, cried the Conservatives—the Liberals have been there long enough; it's our turn now. The age-old cry of time for a change—and it always works when a government has been in power too long. The limit for B.C. would appear to be 12 or 13 years.

Another tremendous Conservative feat day came with the 1928 election. Simon Tolmie, a favorite native son, was swept into office with 35 Conservatives. The Liberals were knocked back to nine, and, of course, naturally Tom Uphill was re-elected, as he always will be now.

The Tolmie government hung on for five years—sure sign a government is bewildered, doesn't know which way to turn, is fearful of its life. In the last year of the Tolmie regime there were desertions from the Conservative party, and it was a Conservative debacle in the 1933 election. Even Tolmie himself was defeated. Herb Ansoncomb ran as an Independent; Harry Pooley called himself a Unionist, though defiantly he told the Parliamentary Guide he was still a Conservative. "Duff" Pattullo swept in with 35 Liberals. The CCF became the Opposition. There wasn't a Tory during to openly call himself a Tory in the House from 1933 to 1937.

There were those who said the Tory sun had set.

In the 1937 election the Conservatives started to come back. They elected eight members. Dr. Frank Patterson was leader of the Opposition. He died. R. L. Maitland became leader.

In 1941 Maitland thought he saw his chance to become premier—the natural, instinctive ambition of every Opposition leader. Yes, 1941—it was to be the Conservatives' great opportunity. The Liberals had been in office eight years. Time for a change, cried the Tories—time for a change—the age-old cry that had worked before.

Yes, time for a change, decided the public—but a change that was a shock to both Liberals and Conservatives. The change was 14 CCFers, so many that the 20 Liberals and 12 Conservatives had to huddle together in the Coalition that was eventually to kill them both off as political powers in this province. However, the Conservatives were able to take some warmth from that 1941 election.

They had elected four more members than in 1937—they had a toehold in the government, even if the Liberals cracked the whip.

The 1945 election—the Conservatives once more swelled with hope; their day would surely come. They were returned—in Coalition, true, but they had 15 members. They had gained three. It gave them more strength in Coalition, enabled them to get a little more out of the Liberals, but not much. But, they said, it was a splendid thing; when the time came when they could fight the Liberals, they would win.

Pat Maitland died. Herb Ansoncomb became Tory leader. And now it is 1949, and time once more for an election. But the CCF is still such a threat Liberals and Conservatives dare not separate, again postpone their inevitable fight at the polls. The 1949 election went the Coalition back stronger than ever, but the Conservative membership in the House dropped from 15 to 13.

Now in January of 1952 Coalition bursts asunder. Liberals and Conservatives are at each others' throats. Mr. Ansoncomb is leader of the Opposition for a session. A good sign, say the Conservatives; oppositions always, sooner or later, become the government.

But not this time. Time for a change, cry Liberals and Conservatives and CCF. Time for a change—but again the public decides on the kind of a change it wants—Social Credit.

Funeral Rites For Fisherman Held at Terrace

Funeral services were held in Terrace on Thursday for Joseph B. Gay who passed away in Terrace last Sunday.

Born in Pittenween, Scotland, 68 years ago, he came to Prince Rupert in 1911 and followed half-but fishing until 1931 when he joined the Department of Fisheries. He retired a few years ago.

He leaves a wife; one son, Mitchell of Nanaimo; and two daughters, Josephine (Mrs. Martin Hansen), and Isobel (Mrs. J. Emerson), both of Prince Rupert; seven grandchildren.

The pallbearers were William Strachan, Tom Dahle, Neil Stroudahl, Dave Robbin, Nick Krook and Martin Hansen.

Down went the Conservatives' 13 members in the 1952 election, and this year the public finished the job—the complete demolition of a party that once ruled this province.

In his defeat and disappointment and humiliation, the court-rooms romantic that stuck by the old Tory ship need not be ashamed. The Conservative party has an honorable place in our history. Under its banner, flying high or drooping, fine men gave of their all to the public service of British Columbia.

George Sundberg Quits Post On Alaska Development Board

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP)—The Alaska Development Board has announced the resignation of George Sundberg, 40, as general manager of the board. He has headed the territorial agency since 1946.

Sundberg said he plans to do other work in the territory and would be relieved as soon as possible.

The 1953 Legislature limited the salary of the board manager to $10,800 a year. Previously the salary was $12,000.

Board members, newly appointed by Gov. Frank Heinzelman, will meet here to chart the future course of the board. They are Don N. Goddman and Clarence Moriarty of Anchorage, W. A. Bates of Ketchikan, and Stanley Tatom of Fairbanks. The governor has not yet made an appointment to the second division place on the board.

Previously Sundberg was an industrial analyst for the Bonneville Power Administration and economist for the National Resources Planning Board. He came to Alaska in 1938 after being in the newspaper business in Washington state.

Terrace Club Revives After 17-2 Drubbing

Visitors Hand G & As Second Loss of Season in Night Game

Terrace moved from the cellar and into third place to exchange levels with Esquires as they split a doubleheader with Gordon & Anderson yesterday at Roosevelt Park, 17-2 and 5-1.

G-As took their second loss this season in the night game after trouncing visitors in the afternoon by 15 runs. In that disastrous event, Terrace pitcher Gray gave up 15 hits and fielders committed four costly errors for several booble-filled innings—two netting five runs each for G-As.

Meanwhile, winning pitcher Christensen held the losers to five scattered hits.

In the night game, Terrace bounced back with some strong ball-playing, with Matthews on the mound holding G-As down to seven scattered hits and one run.

At the same time, G-A pitcher Ian Dunbar was tagged for 10 hits and allowed five earned runs. The game remained tight until the fourth inning after G-As scored once off Hartwig in the first when Terrace brought home two men off four hits.

Terrace scored once in the fifth and again twice in the sixth. G-As tried hard for a rally in the top of the seventh and last inning. Morrison teed off for the only hit, but was forced out at second on a play off a dribble by Dunbar, who was picked off at second when Ford sent a grounder to third base. Ford gained third on a double steal but Hartwig struck out to end the game.

Next games at Roosevelt Park will be the international series with an evening game Tuesday and an afternoon game Wednesday, Dominion Day, between Prince Rupert all-stars and Ketchikan.

Return games will be played in Ketchikan next Saturday and Sunday.

Tonight two well-known baseball films will be shown at the Civic Centre, 8 p.m., "World Series 1952" and "100 Years in Baseball."

LANDING this 32½-pound fish turned into a hunting expedition for Jim White and his brother-in-law, Maynard Kent, at Eau Claire, Wis. Jim snagged the fish near the tail, but it shook loose. The fish was hooked at 6 p.m., and landed an hour and a half later—shot through the head.

SPORTS ROUND-UP

By GALE TALBOT

NEW YORK (AP)—They laughed like anything when little Ogdan volunteered to put on the second of the Archie Moore-Joey Maxim series for the 175-pound championship.

Old Doc Kearns, the experts chuckled, had sold another in-offensive little burg a bill of goods, just as back in the '20s he closed the bank in Shelby, Mont., with his Jack Dempsey-Tommy Gibbons production.

Well, as it turned out, the good doctor only sold the Utah live wires a regular gem, one of the finest boxing shows in some respects that the national television audience has yet sat in on. Probably the old medicine man who manages Maxim surprised himself, but he still deserves credit for having discovered Ogdan.

Probably never before did two bruisers perform before a scenic backdrop of such majesty as those mountains which rear up at the end of Ogdan's main street. The mellow sunlight of late afternoon joined with the ring lamps to do an exceptional lighting job. In the late rounds the commentator said the moon was pitching in, too. It was a night for love and legalized mayhem.

This writer, among others, heard the late Mike Jacobs predict that the time would come when the size of the crowd at ringside would be inconsequential and that television money alone would make everyone rich. We have a feeling this was an important milestone toward the realization of the great promoter's dream. Far as we are concerned they can hold a lot more championships in Ogdan and let the beer-drinkers pick up the tab.

Here was proof that a town not much bigger than an apple orchard (but growing fast, mind you) can stage a big fight /s smoothly as New York or Chicago. It was a professional job in every respect, granting that the Ogdan folks had a right to see several of their home state gladiators introduced on a national hook-up. Perhaps they can be talked out of that next time.

Ogdan even provided a rather superior commentator. He didn't keep it a secret when a man got cut and he called the more damaging punches. That is a great help. About the only place he missed out, we thought, was when he failed to inform his listeners that the distinguished-looking gent who faced the camera and told the press section what he thought of the decision, with gestures, was the good doctor.

United States professional golfers took a one-point lead over Britain in opening day's play for the Ryder Cup at Southport, England, 16 years ago today. The U.S. won that last Ryder Cup series before the Second World War by 8-4. Since the series started in 1926, the U.S. has won seven times to three for Britain.

World's Toughest Motorcycle Races Run on Isle of Man

DOUGLAS, Isle of Man (AP)—This speck of land in the Irish Sea, best known internationally perhaps for its tallest cats, is the cradle and home of the world's toughest motorcycle races.

The event run each June since 1907 is known popularly as the "TT," otherwise the Tourist Trophy races, whose gruelling course is laid out over the twisting, narrow Isle of Man roads.

The self-governing Isle of Man has been the site of this major British sports spectacle ever since the fledgling British motor vehicle industry drew a blank in its bid to test high-powered products.

British law at the turn of the century forbade motor vehicle racing on public roads. Wealthy manufacturers could afford to ship men and machines to compete in continental races for experience and prestige. But the smaller firms pioneering in the trade were caught in between.

RACING STRETCHES

The solution appeared when the Manx government agreed to seal off stretches of the island's hilly, dusty thoroughfares. The races were inaugurated in 1907 with 17 entries, which chugged around the six-mile course at an average speed of 33 miles an hour.

Not all Manxmen were as cooperative at first as the Manx government. A whip-wielding farmer held up the first race by declining to remove his horse and cart from the racetrack.

Since then, however, expansion has been steady, and so has the death toll.

Sixteen lives have been claimed since the Second World War alone, including four at the 1952 events where the average speed in the main senior event reached more than 93 miles an hour and exceeded 100 in spots.

The peril of the 37½-mile course lies in the 200 corners it contains and the steadily increasing power of the British, American and other machines used there. Six men died in 1951 in 10 week's racing and two-week warm-up period. Yet the entry list continues to grow, reaching more than 400 this year. The races draw thousands of spectators, to the satisfaction of the 54,000 island residents whose main industry is the tourist trade. More than 600,000 visitors arrived at the 27½-square-mile island in all last year. Manxmen, who provide some of the best motorcycle racers themselves, willing endure the noise and confusion of the TT for the money it brings.

BEAUMONT, Tex. (AP)—Babe Zaharias returns to golf this week, apparent victor over cancer.

The great woman athlete, who had to quit the links trail for an operation, got the good word Friday—her physician told her she could start hitting that little white ball soon.

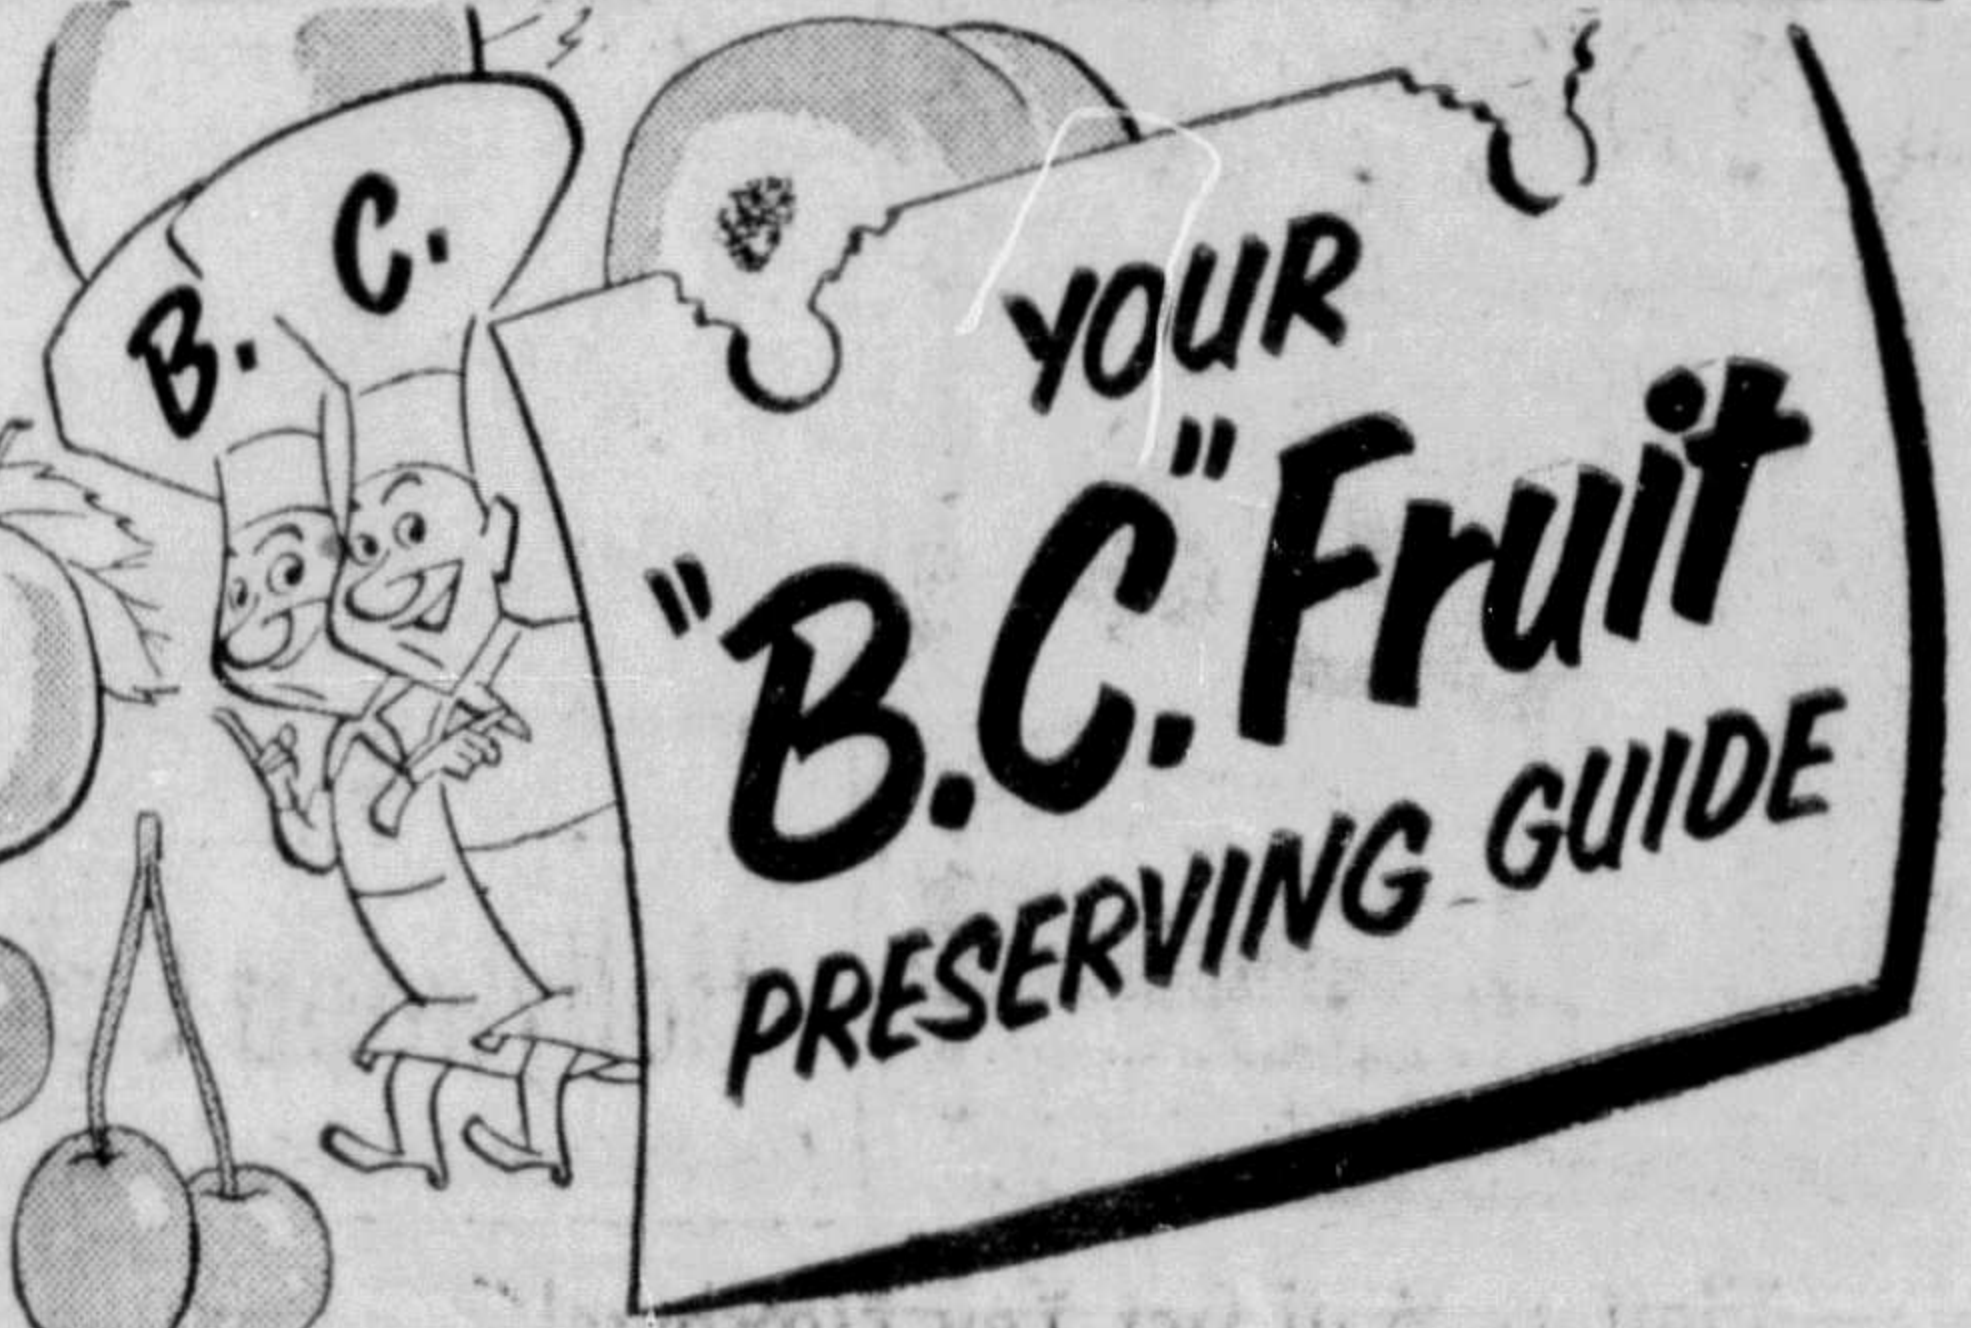

That was enough for the woman who starred in every sport she tried—champion of the Olympic Games, all-American in basketball, the top golfer. She said she plans to go to her home in Tampa, Fla., and after a couple of days rest will begin chipping and putting.

Dr. Robert A. Moore, who performed the operation 2½ months ago here, made it a sort of birthday present when he said: "We are all glad that you have recovered so fast. I actually think you will be back hitting a golf ball soon. Just how soon, I'm leaving up to your own judgement."
