Bookmaker Attacked

VANCOUVER (CP)—A few hours after he testified in a bookmaking conspiracy trial here, Ad Forshaw, a wealthy, self-admitted bookmaker was attacked by two gun-wielding thugs. He was robbed of $300. Police said Forshaw was gun-whipped by two men who beat him about the head. He was not however, seriously injured. The attack occurred outside his suburban home in West Vancouver. Forshaw, called as a key witness in the bookmakers' trial in which 26 are charged with conspiracy, testified for the crown, telling the assize court jury of his connections with bookmaking in Vancouver from 1944 until 1947 when he "quit the racket."

Plane Safe In Emergency

COMOX (CP)—A Queen Charlotte Airlines flying boat, with 18 aboard, its aerolons jammed and wing tip missing, made an emergency landing at this Vancouver Island village Friday. Pilot Bill Peters brought the big plane in for a smooth landing as police fire and inhalator crews stood by. The plane was on a regular flight to Sullivan Bay, 200 miles northwest of Vancouver, when a wave ripped off the wing tip float. Peters quickly gunned the engine and pulled for the air, making for calm Comox harbor.

Civil Service Rules Opposed By UK Unions

LONDON (CP)—Indignant protests have been expressed by British trade union officials over the government's decision to extend the civil service retirement age, at the same time that drastic staff cuts are being imposed as part of the government's economy program. The criticism developed after several thousand employees had received their notices and R. A. Butler, chancellor of the Exchequer, had announced that the minimum age for leaving the service henceforth would be 60 years. In future, the chancellor said, the general aim will be to employ all civil servants for as long as practicable. Retirement will be between 60 and 65 either at the request of the individual or the departmental head. Tests of efficiency will be applied as employees approach the 60-year mark, and at regular intervals thereafter if they continue to work. Those who fail to reach acceptable standards will be retired but no stigma will be attached to their departure.

Winch Objects To Deferment Of Amendments

Calls Grits and Tories "Political Prostitutes" VICTORIA (CP)—The Progressive Conservative opposition and Liberals yesterday combined in the British Columbia Legislature to defeat the CCF want-of-confidence motion in the Liberal government by a vote of 34 to 11. Ten Progressive Conservatives—one was absent—voted with 24 Liberals. Tom Uphill (Labor, Fernie), W. A. C. Bennett (Ind., South Okanagan) and Mrs. Tilly Rolston (Ind., Vancouver-Point Grey) voted with the eight CCF members. CCF Leader Harold Winch moved a want-of-confidence motion because the government said it will not deal with inquiry board reports into hospital insurance and labor acts. The motion was seconded by Rupert Hagen (CCF, Grand Forks-Greenwood). Herbert Ansbom, Progressive Conservative leader, said his party had no confidence in the government but it was against introducing legislation on hospital insurance and labor acts. Therefore, his party was forced to vote against the CCF motion. In a 90-minute speech during which he referred to the Liberals and Progressive Conservatives as "political prostitutes," Mr. Winch said the government either did not have the courage to accept recommendations in the reports or intended to use them for political campaign promises. The government had a majority and a constitutional right to deal with these "vital issues" despite the break-up of the Liberal and Progressive Conservative coalition last month. Winch said Premier Johnson had stated the government had no mandate to carry on with major legislation "in order to evade the government's responsibility."

GROSS BETRAYAL

"This is a gross betrayal of the people of British Columbia," said Winch. "The Liberals have not got the intestinal fortitude to face up to the problems of the government administration." Mr. Winch said his party is opposed to the use of transferable votes in the next election. "It is a procedure," he said, "unknown in the democratic world, and an act of which Hitler or Mussolini would be proud. There were thousands of spoiled ballots under the old system. Hardly anybody will understand the new."

Vancouver or Rupert?

WHILE planning huge new port developments in Burrard Inlet at Vancouver including the putting in of great terminal facilities on the North Shore, it can well be wondered what, if anything, the Canadian National Railways may have in mind as to the development of its own port of Prince Rupert.

It has been said by a Vancouver editorial writer that "one factor which has undoubtedly determined high CN officials to not put off any longer a definite stride to the north side of the (Vancouver) harbor is the location of the aluminum plant at Kitimat-Kemano."

Yesterday it was announced that the federal government intended to ask Parliament for $5,000,000 for the building of a railway from Terrace on the Canadian National line to Kitimat. Development and use of terminal facilities at Prince Rupert might well be expected to tie up with that railway project since the port of Prince Rupert is only 96 miles from Terrace whereas Vancouver, via the Canadian National line, is well over 1000 miles.

At the same time Kitimat is only 80 miles or so from Prince Rupert by the coastal route while it is 400 miles from Vancouver.

So it is difficult to comprehend, by any stretch of imagination, how Vancouver instead of Prince Rupert is going to be the port for Kitimat although, of course, some railway officials, particularly those in comfortable residence there, might like to make it Vancouver.

The justification of the whole big terminal development of Canadian National Railways at Vancouver may be considered by some to be superfluous but that certainly cannot be said of Prince Rupert.

However, we may derive some encouragement and confidence from the fact that a more favorable attitude towards Prince Rupert has been developing among some top railway officials as they view the new and powerful tide of development generally in this area.

Women and Politics

AS POLITICS and political discussion fills the air again, we wonder what has happened to the women talk of whose rights was so vivid in the days of a generation or so ago. In those days it was the rallying cry of women's rights that led the gentler sex from a frankly secondary position to full equality with men. Hardly anyone now would restate the arguments by which the dominant male sought to support his case that, under his direction alone, lay the safety and progress of the world.

Today, as women walk side by side with men to cast an equal ballot, it is hard to remember how difficult and relentless was the battle to secure this equality; how readily women suffered indignity, imprisonment and persecution for the cause.

So it is a continuing surprise that women who could then demand to be heard in the nation's councils should now be content to remain voiceless and inactive, how many women are content to admit that there are decisions and actions in public life beyond their understanding and on which they have nothing to say. Can it be that a measurable part of woman's dignity and much of the rights that were fought for so gallantly are back in the ash can?

Jap Fish Treaty Bad

THE Vancouver Labor Council has solidly backed the Fishermen's Union which calls on parliament to reject the unwelcome fisheries treaty to re-legalize Japanese fishing in B.C. coastal waters.

No treaty is better than a bad treaty. Unless and until Canada can get Japan to agree to a solid, sane bargain, based on the principle of each staying on respective halves of the Pacific Ocean, there is no point in having any treaty at all.

THE IMPARTIAL and authoritative Canadian Institute of International Affairs said, in its background release on the earlier Japanese peace treaty, that "it was on the matter of fishing that Canada's relations with Japan were most strained."

"During the early 1930's Japanese fishing vessels and floating canneries able to operate for long periods of time far distant from home bases began fishing near the Canadian and American shores of the Pacific. The effect of this intrusion, while not within the territorial three mile limit, was to seriously deplete reserves and disrupt conservation programs.

"Canadian and American fishermen objected strenuously and stern representations by the U.S. government to the Japanese government secured the latter's agreement in 1933 to continue to withhold licensing of Japanese vessels in this area. The results were perceptible but not entirely satisfactory and Japanese fishermen continued to be sighted off Alaska and B.C. Japan was never persuaded to adhere to the international conventions between the U.S. and Canada providing for the control and regulation of the sockeye and halibut fisheries.

"Consequently, Canada would have been pleased to see the peace treaty contain specific clauses prohibiting Japanese fishing off the west coast, perhaps up to a distance of 150 miles.

IT SEEMS astonishing that just after the World Court has ruled in the dispute between British and Norwegian fishermen, Canada should be asked to accept something based on the very reverse principle. The World Court ruled that British fishermen must keep out of Norwegian coast waters, even though long custom made their entry there habitual.

When the recent war came to an end, with the total defeat of Japan, the world was told that never again would Japan be allowed to do certain things:

She would never be allowed to re-arm, or build new navies. She would never be allowed to flood markets with cheap goods, produced under conditions of under-paid, barrack-like labor, and by-passing patents held in other countries.

She would never again be allowed to fish in Canadian coastal waters, nor to bring back the floating canneries, or otherwise disrupt our fish conservation measures.

NOW JAPAN is being rapidly rebuilt as a military power. But she is sternly forbidden by U.S. policy to trade with her natural market, which is China. So in order to try to feed her nearly 80 million people she is forced to compete more frantically than ever for other markets (and hence to make it increasingly impossible for Britain to sell in the area from Hong Kong to Malay and India). She is also forced to seek new sources of food—one of which is to be the fisheries of B.C.

Here surely is the most glaring illustration to date of the economic insanity of the Japanese settlement arranged by John Foster Dulles.

Canada does not have the power to undo the basic mistake. But Canada has the power to say "No—No—A Thousand Times NO" to the proposal that we think it is OK for Japanese fishermen to come back here.

ray... Reflects and Reminisces

One day a ship laden with wheat sails from Prince Rupert for delivery in Japan. A day or so later along comes a shipload of sulphur for delivery where its needed in a huge manufacturing plant. Things are picking up, speaking industrially.

Ridley Island is being surveyed, with a view to its possible choice as an airport for Prince Rupert. There will be an examination of soil formation. The latter precaution was quite unnecessary when the townsite of Kaien Island was examined.

THE NEW JUNCTION

That railroad from Terrace to Kitimat will cost at least five millions, according to what is heard at Ottawa. People appear to think the only town on earth that will feel the contact will be Terrace. Five millions will exert an influence not only in Terrace but all over Northern British Columbia. Yes, and likewise in Prince Rupert.

We think it was not later than a month ago another expert, explaining the Russian crisis, suggested the Russian attack would be based from a remote point northeasterly of the North Pole. The expert, who spoke over the air, was numbered 673 and could be heard quite plainly. Anyway, it's not premature to heed this defence of Prince Rupert movement. It was first talked about forty years ago.

HE HAS HOPES

Oil has been found on George Walker's ranch in Manitoba where he homesteaded in 1908. If he makes any money, he says, it will mean a trip home to Scotland. If he makes any money? What does 250 barrels a day mean? "George—dae ye ken it?"

Union steamer Chilcotin, Capt. William McCombe, arrived in port at 6:30 last evening from Vancouver via Kemano and sailed later in the evening for south Queen Charlotte Island points whence she is due back here southbound tomorrow evening.

Canada does not have the power to undo the basic mistake. But Canada has the power to say "No—No—A Thousand Times NO" to the proposal that we think it is OK for Japanese fishermen to come back here.

Saturday Sermon

THE RIGHT ACCENT

(By REV. FRED ANTROBUS, First Baptist Church)

"Thy speech betrayeth thee."—Matt. 26:73.

It is not hard to tell from the speech of most folk what their native country is. Their accent gives them away. Such is the distinctive feature of our speech that some people can even tell from what particular part of their country they came.

A great deal is said in the Bible about the speech and its importance in the Christian life. In the Old Testament there is a record of men who were betrayed by their speech (Judges 12:6). They were enemies trying to pass themselves off as friends. Their accent betrayed them, and it cost them their lives.

In the New Testament there is a record of a friend who tried to pass himself off as an enemy (Matthew 26:73). It might have cost him his eternal salvation if he had not gone out and repented with bitter tears.

Of the two stories, the one concerning Peter is the more tragic. The Ephraimites tried to deny their origin and pretend they were men of Gilead, but the deadly fact they forgot was their accent, which they could not get rid of so easily. They could only say "shibboleth" for "shibboleth", and this failure cost their lives.

It was different in the case of Peter, for he was a friend of the Lord Jesus, one who had been His companion and seen many of His wonderful miracles of healing and power and heard His gracious words. Yet in the presence of the enemies of the Lord, Peter joined himself to them in denying that he was His friend. It is almost unbelievable.

The crowning shame for Peter must have been when he discovered that his speech had betrayed him. There is too much of Peter in us all for us to condemn him. We often sing: "Jesus and shall it ever be, a mortal man ashamed of Thee?" And yet every day of our lives we deny our Lord. Jesus Christ is often wounded in the house of His best friends and the wounds of a friend are a thousand times more painful than those of an avowed enemy.

Let us remember that, if we have the accent of the Christian, the world knows about it all right. We cannot escape from it and to stand in the presence of the enemies of the Lord, professing to be His and yet denying Him in word and deed deceives no one and will bring nothing but shame to ourselves. We need never apologize or be ashamed for our accent if we speak the language of the followers of Christ. Let the world know that you have been with Him. Rejoice if your speech and life betrays you as belonging to Him for out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh, and we are His faithful witnesses.

Terrace Girl Bride Here

Miss Stella Ann Kuruok, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Kuruok of Terrace, and Bernard Wagner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Rudolf Wagner of Moose Jaw, were united in marriage at a wedding ceremony of much local and district interest which took place last Saturday evening in First United Church with Rev. L. C. Sieber officiating. It was a double ring ceremony for which organ wedding music was rendered by Henry Plum. Many friends attended.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was a pretty picture in white satin and lace with long lace-trimmed veil. She carried a bouquet of red roses.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Elsie Thompson who wore mauve taffeta and net skirt and carried carnations. The bridesmaid, Miss Rosemarie Kuruok, chose blue taffeta with bouquet of pink carnations and blue iris. Trainbearer were little Jacqueline Kuruok and Donald Doumont.

James Thompson was groomsman. Neil Mentinko acted as usher.

Girl Guide Ceremonies Impressive

An impressive Girl Guide and Brownie Thinking Day candle-light ceremony took place in Annunciation Hall last evening. It was attended by all Guides and Brownies in the city and among the spectators were a large number of Wolf Cubs in uniform and many parents and friends.

The candles were arranged in the Guide Trefol form on the floor. The Guides marched smartly into place, forming a horseshoe around the sides of the hall, and the Brownies then took up position on the inside.

This ceremony is in remembrance of Guides and Brownies all over the world. Difference of color, race and language does not count—the only important thing is the "Promise." Candles were lit for the Guide and Brownie Promise and one for each of the laws, ten of them.

Candles were then lit by a Guide or a Brownie for each country that is a member of this organization. The first "country" candle to be lit was that of Great Britain where the Girl Guides were first started in 1909. Twenty-five candles were soon shining for all the Girl Guide countries.

This ceremony took place on the birthday of the founder of Scouting and Guiding.

It was a most impressive ceremony. The lights of the hall were darkened. The girls did their parts with a quiet dignity and the others sat in complete and orderly silence.

At the conclusion the Brownies enthusiastically gave the Brownie Hymn, then followed with the Guide and Brownie prayers and the musical "Taps." Everyone stood at attention while the girls sang for the first time "God Save the Queen." Mrs. Duncan Black, captain, was in charge of the Girl Guides.

An "E" for effort could easily be awarded to Prince Rupert's Sea Cadets as these boys continue to show improvement. Training is well advanced and attendance at drills continues to hover around the 100 per cent mark as the corps prepares for the half yearly inspection on February 28 by the area Sea Cadet officer from Vancouver.

Invitation is being extended to all parents of the boys and citizens of Prince Rupert to attend the inspection, which commences at 7:30.

WRENS

Smart and trim in their new uniforms the women of the local Wren division at Chatham present a picture reminiscent of the Second World War, bringing back memories of that which many thought would never re-occur.

The Wrens, recruited to full strength and halfway through the training year, display keen interest in each phase of the training.

On completion of summer training at HMCS Cornwallis in Digby, N.S., they will begin specialized training in a trade of their choice this fall.

Lieutenant (S) John W. Fisher, RCN, made a brief inspection of all naval radio stations in the district before departing aboard the Prince George for the naval base at Esquimalt.

Chief Petty Officer and Mrs. Harry Cuttress sailed aboard the Camosun last Sunday. On completion of leave, Chief Cuttress will report to Coverdale, N.B., to take up new duties.

CUSTOMS

It is laid down that the sentry shall fire his rifle at sunset. The reason for this is a relic of the days of the flint-lock rifle, and was done to make sure that the rifle should be freshly loaded and primed for the hours of darkness.

In the ten year period from 1941 to 1951 five persons emigrated from Canada for every six persons who immigrated to Canada.

FIRST ROCK to skid along the ice is tossed by Doug Frizzell at the curling rink official opening. Mr. Frizzell provided the building in which the rink is housed. Looking on is ardent curler, Dr. L. M. Greene, original executive member of Prince Rupert Curling Club.

MANCHESTER, England (C)—Economy thy for fuel-short Britain—share your bath water.
Mrs. Mary Hargreaves, chairman of the National Council of Women, said husbands and wives could easily share the same water.
"Of course," she said, "we don't think more than two people could properly do so."
In the case of a family of small children, however, the practice would do no harm.
Here are some other economy suggestions made by family women:
Calendars and greeting cards should be smaller, and thinner paper should be used for letter writing; paint just the initials "E.R." or "B.R.S." on state transport instead of the full "British Railways" and "British Road Services;" and use flint lighters for gas instead of matches.

Suicide is Top Secret

By TOM REEDY BERLIN (AP) — Suicide has become "top secret" in the Russian zone of Germany. The Communist government has impounded all records of suicides, has forbidden all newspapers to list suicide ever as the cause of death and in many cases has compelled doctors to falsify their reports.

An East zone doctor ventured an opinion that the suicide rate is "very high" but only the tight-lipped People's Police have any idea what it is. The "outlawing" of suicide is in keeping with the Red philosophy that such things just don't happen in a Communist "paradise." The orders to keep up such a facade apply to Gerhart Eisler's propaganda ministry which controls the press; to the interior ministry which governs the police and to the central administration which handles statistics. The ministry of health gets into the act by frequently certifying a suicide as a death from heart attack or merely from old age. Known tuberculosis cases are never listed as such. East Germans, still not accustomed to such tinkering with obvious truths, say that almost three-fourths of the suicides in the Russian zone are traceable to "the hopelessness" of life under tyranny. A clergyman commented: "It is the hopelessness of the psychic, the spiritual and the economic situation which makes men and women throw their lives away so easily." A farmer, for instance, cannot meet the Communist-imposed quotas. It may be that the quotas for him were deliberately fixed so high he couldn't possibly meet them. His farm would then be subject to seizure and be assigned to a favored political friend. He gives up in the face of what appears to him to be certain death. Little business men or mechanics who have been squeezed out by the encroaching "nationalized" industry; the teacher fired for "political unreliability," the pensioner who can't make ends meet, are other candidates for suicide behind the Iron curtain. The harsh economic laws—five years in prison for tiny infractions—frighten the public and those too weak to resist or to flee to the west frequently take the suicidal way out.

Worthwhile Treaty, Says Buchanan—Winter Fishing Active Here

One of the complaints of fishermen's organizations, which have been going on record as opposed to the acceptance of the tripartite international fisheries treaty, recently drawn up at Tokyo between Canada, United States and Japan, is that it does not settle the problem of Hecate Straits nor define the limits of territorial waters.

The Fisheries Association of British Columbia has come up with a statement from John Buchan, president of the association, on various questions at issue in the North Pacific fisheries convention. In regard to the problem of Hecate Straits and territorial waters limits the statement has the following to say:

It did not propose to do so and it would have been difficult to settle a long-standing bipartite dispute at a short tripartite conference. I agree that the Hecate Straits problem should be settled, but it can be settled only through negotiation between the United States and Canada on a frank and amicable basis. The treaty does not prejudice in any way our claims in connection with Hecate Straits. The whole question of territorial waters is extremely complex. It involves international policy and any declaration by Canada would almost certainly be referred to the International Court. Settlement of the simpler Norwegian case took years; our case could not have been settled between three countries in six weeks. However, we make no commitment in signing the treaty. Article 1, Sec. 2, states: "Nothing in this convention shall be deemed to affect adversely the claims of any contracting party in regard to the limits of territorial waters or to the jurisdiction of a coastal state over fisheries." This provision was put in largely as a result of my own insistence.

Mr. Buchanan, who went to Tokyo with the Canadian delegation which included Hon. R. W. Mayhew and E. T. Applewhite, MP for Skeena, sums it up as a worthwhile treaty because: It is based on sound conservation principles. It establishes a precedent of international co-operation in fisheries. It is a workable treaty, freely accepted. It safeguards our basic raw material and makes possible the proper management and protection of other species important to our fishery. It should facilitate further collaboration with the United States on other important problems. It does not prejudice our claims with respect to territorial waters. It is a step forward in the right direction.

FLATFISH BONANZA Biggest business on the waterfront at this time of year comes from flatfish. There are millions, as Skidegate Inlet once again gives up a bonanza harvest to Prince Rupert trawlers. At better than four cents a pound to fishermen, the market is staying at a steady level, fish dealers say. "More people must be eating B.C. fillets," one fishing company manager said yesterday. "We can sell all we can get and more."

Another source of activity is clams and never before has this type of sea food seen such a popular market. This also has attracted more people to clam digging than ever before. Several companies can claim — B. C. Packers Ltd., for instance, have just opened a new clam-canning section at their plant. Miller's Cannery has specialized in that field for some time, but is busier than usual this season. Other sea-food houses freeze the clams after they are taken from the shell and packaged. Bacon Fisheries are busy at that process. Clam diggers get 3 1/2 cents a pound, in the shell, "mud and all" as one of them put it. Best clam beds are found on Porcher and Dundas Islands. The diggers work with the tide, digging in the sand with a tined garden fork along the water's edge. Usually, at low tide the more fruitful clam beds are found. "Just like digging potatoes," says Arden Smith, who landed 50 sacks (100 pounds each) at the docks after a week's work with his partner. "I dig 'em, Joe picks 'em."

Clams have been popular for centuries as a delicacy and perhaps the most popular dish made from this sea food is chowder. Clam chowder gets a big, hearty there will be some changes, as well as improvements, such as more than one teacher for the size of the present class as well as additional equipment, when practical demonstrations become essential. More practicing in arithmetic is needed. To provide an enhanced freight service for the ports of Northern British Columbia, the 160-foot passenger-freighter Gulf Mariner has been chartered. Once, she was a mine sweeper and was brought from Halifax to the Pacific coast for conversion. Her service speed is 16 knots. Master is Captain Cecil Roberts. Al Strang is mate, and Ted Hyde chief engineer. Special hydraulic cargo winches have lifting capacity of fifteen tons. Much of her work will include towing of barges. She will doubtless be a frequent visitor at Prince Rupert.

It's twenty-five years since the Pacific Fisheries Experimental station was established at Prince Rupert. Early in 1926, at Seal Cove a few technological investigations were started. This was in the basement of a boarding house and, so far as location was concerned, was on a temporary basis. In 1926 (November) an official opening of a newly constructed building to serve as a station took place. It was on the provincial government dock. The general expectation had always been that it would remain here but, in this, there was disappointment. In the summer of 1942 the establishment was moved to Vancouver.

Commencing March 1, Alaskan shrimps will be flown from Juneau, destination being Seattle. Tons will be shipped by plane. It is reported a general average of between 700 and 1,000 pounds of fresh shrimps will go south daily from fisheries along Alaska's inside passage.
