GOING TO REST on a country road, 65-year-old Rudolf Emanuelsson is a familiar figure to many around Copenhagen, as he pedals his bike with all of his worldly possessions tied to handlebars and a trailer. Too rich to work, too stingy to buy or rent a home—according to the gossip—Emanuelsson wanders over the countryside lecturing all who will listen to his rants about high taxes.

More Support Urged For Music Trail Series To Be Continued in Rupert

There is a large sale of tickets for the Civic Centre box office tonight's Ye-Kwei Sze and greater advance of the two remaining of this season there is a chance the Alaska Music Trail series will be dropped so Prince Rupert is concerned. It was disclosed last night at an emergency meeting of the Music Trail membership called to face the rather grim situation. To help prevent such an occurrence an executive, plus a steering committee was elected to devise ways and means of keeping the group "out of the red." Robert C. Telford was named chairman and Mrs. Fred Jones, secretary. Mrs. Don Forward and Dr. L. M. Greene were elected to the committee and another member will be appointed from the Civic Centre association.

Deep Snows Prevent Attempt to Reach Crashed Bomber

Efforts to reach the wreckage of the strategic bomber which crashed 40 miles north of Hazelton last night were prevented by deep snows. The wreckage of the bomber was sighted by the RCAF when searching for the lost plane of millionaire Texan oilman Ellis Hall two months ago. The crew of the bomber bailed out over Princess Royal Island when the plane's motors caught fire and icing conditions were reportedly causing the plane to lose altitude.

Construction Blues Up in October

Permits with a total value of $32,025 were applied for in Prince Rupert City hall in October, a considerable increase over the amount of construction work planned in September of this year when only 10 permits were issued. Over October's total construction is more than $7,800 less than in October 1952 when building in the city was heading to a $1,000,000 yearly total. The number of permits taken out in October last month brings the month total for 1953 up to 10. Last year at this time the total was valued at $426,527 had been out.

Indian Leaders May Form Group To Discuss Act

VANCOUVER (CP)—Chief Willy Scow, head of the British Columbia Indian Brotherhood, indicated here that Indian leaders in Canada may soon form a national council which would recommend the amendment of the Indian Act. Commenting on his recent trip to Ottawa where he conferred with citizenship and immigration minister Walter Harris, Chief Scow said he talked with many Indian leaders and "found we all had the same problems which could be better dealt with by an inter-provincial organization." He said Indian representatives had asked Mr. Harris that statutes of the Indian Act forbidding Indians to buy bottled liquor be repealed.

Russia Achieves Double Crop

LONDON (Reuters)—Russian science this year brought about two crops of potatoes in the country's warm southern regions, according to the Literary Journal. The Journal said the idea came from Prof. Trofin Lysenko, chief of the plant breeding and genetics institute, who suggested that potatoes could be planted in the summer as well as in the spring.

Welcoming Group Finds Chinese Singer Enjoying Harbor View From Ship's Deck

A brief spell of sunshine, combined with Prince Rupert's beautiful harbor view, almost foiled the purpose of a welcoming committee meeting the Prince George this morning. The sun and the view held bass-baritone Yi-Kwei Sze spellbound on the upper deck, while the welcoming committee, comprising representatives of the Prince Rupert Chinese Community and the Civic Centre, searched the ship from stem to stern, looking for the artist.

The artist's wife, Nancy Lee Sze who usually accompanies him in his concerts, was taken ill with a throat infection in Seattle, and Mrs. Oles was called on at the last moment to make the trip. Preparation of Liquor Act Delays Cocktail Bar Opening VICTORIA.—British Columbians won't be celebrating the Christmas season in plush cocktail lounges after all. In fact, informed government sources said Tuesday it will probably be March or April before cocktail lounges and night clubs will be able to serve liquor by the glass.

Previously, it was reported that main centres in the province might have new outlets by Christmas. However, it now is reported that the Liquor Control Board won't be ready to designate the licencing areas provided under the province's new liquor act until early next year.

In addition, it will be some time yet before government legal experts finish drafting regulations for the act. Meanwhile, it was reported that the government will retain the one-man liquor board set-up under chairman Col. Donald McGugan.

Pioneers Still Needed

PERHAPS there have never been more fascinating tales told than those originating with our country's early pioneers who, coming from many lands, were inspired with a courage that they themselves could hardly have defined.

How many of us today feel like those men and women who pioneered Canada, or to get closer to home, those who at the turn of the century stood on a hilltop and first looked down upon this valley we now inhabit?

How are we going to get them? Only if we follow the example of our predecessors and go out after them.

How many times during the past year have we heard such remarks as—British Columbia, the Land of Opportunity—B.C. where they are pushing back the frontier to make way for industry—industrial development springing up in the wilds of British Columbia, and so on.

When the plebiscite for the new water and sewerage systems comes up will we have the courage to vote "Yes" and pay for it; are we willing to do something towards an adequate hospital; are we going to stand back and wait for the road to Kitimat?

The early history of our country's pioneers is both stimulating and inspiring because of their fight against odds to get what they wanted.

We have a chance right now to show vision and foresight. If we are convinced that we want and need these things, let's have the courage of our convictions and go after them.

OTTAWA DIARY By NORMAN M. MacLEOD

Parliament Hill political circles consider that one of the safest wagers of the moment is that the Niagara Falls provincial by-election will develop an interesting angle of national significance before too many weeks or months have elapsed.

The likelihood is foreseen of it helping to tip the scales in the argument in PC circles over the continuance of the Drew party leadership.

Certainly the Niagara Falls result provides made-to-order evidence to bolster the case of the anti-Drew faction. Federally, the seat is a new one. Provincially it has been Liberal for almost 20 years.

Nowhere else on the political map has the contrast between the ineffectiveness of the Conservatives under the Drew leadership—and their effectiveness under different leadership—been pin-pointed so strikingly. The voting areas in the two contests were the same. The Conservative candidates in both cases were of equal acceptability. The only major factor of difference was the leadership in the two cases.

In his statement to newsmen after the counting of the ballots had revealed the comfortable margin of his victory, PC candidate Jolley declared frankly and simply: "My victory is a tribute to Premier Frost."

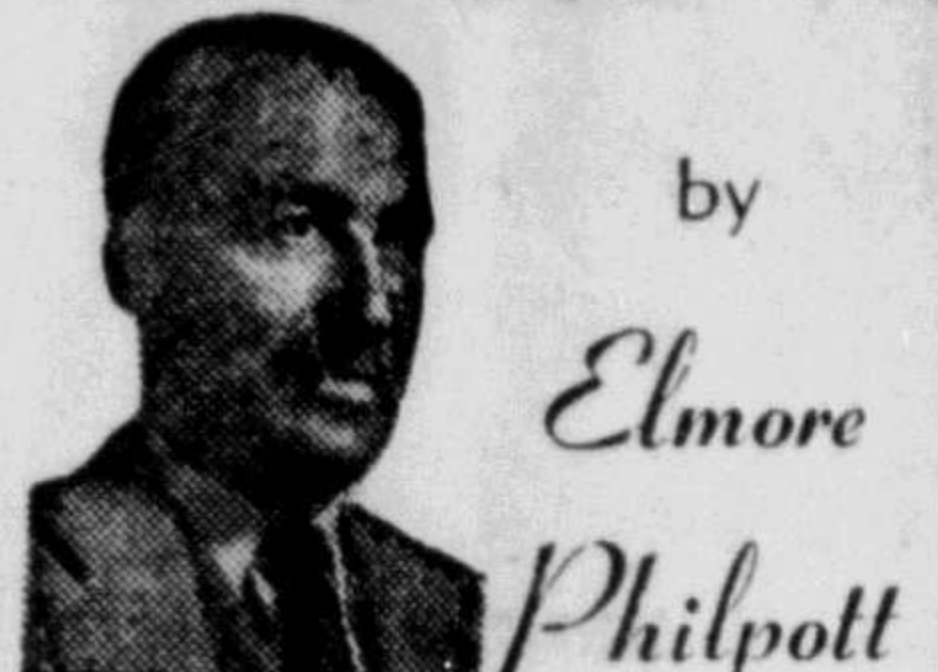

The lesson for Federal PC's could hardly be clearer; what they need is a leader in the Federal field with the acceptability of Federal voters that Premier Frost has to provincial voters. In theory, that was what the 1948 convention was supposed to have given the party. The reason for Mr. Drew's selection was the belief—now demonstrated to have been unhappily mistaken—that he could swing back into the PC column the Ontario ridings which are traditionally Conservative.

The only question at the moment is whether the PC grass roots are going to be given an opportunity to pass upon the party leadership. All signs indicate that the Drew clique in the party intends to sit tight if at all possible. But the Niagara Falls by-election is one more happening that's going to make it more difficult for the Drew leadership to resist popular opinion in the party.

As I See It

Race Rights in News A HIGH official in the public service in Toronto has stirred up a storm of public indignation by the use of the word "nigger" on a TV program.

The official has made things worse by his excuse that he had used the word all his life and never knew it had insulting meaning.

One might well wonder by what qualification the city of Toronto picks its public officials, or ask "Brother, where have you been since 1900?"

THERE are certain terms, which no one would ever use, except as deliberate insults. And anybody who would deliberately use a word which he knew hurt the feelings of another human being, on the mere ground of racial or national origin, shade of skin, shape of nose, or slant of eyebrow—that person is just not a civilized person.

A. J. Arnold of the Jewish Western Bulletin suggests that there should be a newspaper and radio "Goodwill Code" to guard against misuse of terms which are derogatory.

I do not know of any reputable newspaper in all Canada which will permit the use of rank offending terms like nigger, wop, dago, bohunk, kike, or chink.

Occasionally something slips into print, like "a nigger in the woodpile" phrase which recently found its way into a Vancouver headline. But I do not think this ever happens again.

If the offending term is brought to the attention of the publishers concerned, no doubt publishers will offend his own subscribers, for no other reason than the accident of their birth.

WE STILL do use borderline words in B.C. like Jap and Douk.

I never felt that the shop terms for Japanese had any insulting connotation, but once I found that some Japanese resented it I quit using it. Likewise with the nickname "Douk" for Doukhobor. So far as I know, the Doukhobors do not resent that term any more than citizens of north-eastern U.S.A. resent the term Yankee, or the short form, Yank.

But if I ever find that Doukhobors do feel hurt at the short term, I will certainly never use it again. How about it?

MR. ARNOLD suggests that newspapers should never identify criminals, or others in the news in a bad light, by their race or color if the effect of such identification is to bring odium on a whole innocent group.

He says that in murder cases we are never told that the culprit was a Scot, Frenchman or Dutchman. But we are told if the murderer or rapist was a negro, or if the dope peddler was a Chinese.

I think that point is well taken. I am sure that American papers never identify as negroes their numerous citizens of African ancestry who win almost all the prizes at the Olympic games. Nor are U.S. negro soldiers identified as such in the casualty lists.

But on one minor argument it seems to me Mr. Arnold is not quite right. He asks, what point there was in identifying as an East Indian the deposed pro-Communist premier of British Guiana—Dr. Jagan.

It seems to me that, precisely because the race war is one of the main factors in the Guiana situation that it was necessary to identify the ex-premier by his racial origin.

But his main proposal is all to the good.

VICTORIA REPORT by J. K. Nesbitt

A few days ago a small group of us stood in fog-shrouded Ross Bay Cemetery, the mists swirling damply about us, and we put down into the earth that she loved all that was mortal of Alice Mary Carr.

Miss Carr was a little old lady of 84 years, blind, bright and cheery as the birds she fed every day of her life. It was my good fortune to meet Miss Alice three years ago. I remember she made bread for me, and hot tea. She was the gentle sister of the tempestuous Emily Carr, whose paintings and writings have created a race almost fanatical in their devotion to everything this strange, strong woman did.

I was then gathering material on Emily's life, and so it was I had tea with Miss Alice in her cozy cottage on land that was once part of her father's many acres, in a Victoria that is now dead and gone, but whose memory remains to lend glamor to the present.

Alice was two years older than Emily. She appears to have been Emily's favorite sister. Emily called Alice her gentle sister. Perhaps it was that Alice learned not to argue and row with Emily if Emily stormed, and she frequently did, Alice let her storm, and got out of her way. Could that be what Bruce Hutchinson meant when he wrote: "The mystery of Alice—who fought and subdued life on her own terms, and alone."

Alice gave Emily a tremendous devotion, and Emily was grateful for it. Alice gave Emily a blind, and sympathetic understanding, though she could not understand Emily than she could read Egyptian. Alice seldom questioned Emily; she let Emily be Emily, knowing that Emily would be Emily, no matter how much others might try to make Emily not be Emily.

But Emily would not live with Alice or the other sisters. She said she would not live in a household of old maids in the end, however, old and sick and tired, worn out by the fury that she put into her work. Emily went to Alice's cottage, to be near her gentle sister, who would care for her. But they had separate apartments. So determined was Emily on keeping her individuality that she painted a rough board white, and in black letters, printed: "For Miss Alice Carr take the path to the right; for Miss Emily Carr take the gravel path to the left," and she nailed this sign to the front gate.

The last few years of Emily's life (she died in 1945) in the little Carr cottage near Beacon Hill Park must often have been

Rapid-Fire Passage of Legislation Cuts Time For MLA's To Study Bills

Rapid-fire passage of legislation during the recent session at Victoria made it impossible to give proper study to the various bills, Bruce Brown, MLA, declared at the monthly meeting of the Chamber of Commerce.

Giving a report on his term in the legislature, Mr. Brown pointed out that all legislation was passed between Thursday of one week and Saturday of the next, not counting the weekend or Friday afternoon.

One of the four Liberals in the House, Mr. Brown confirmed the opinion of party leader Arthur Laing that it was "legislation by exhaustion."

"The last 10 days or so were a period of complete frustration," he said. "It was almost impossible to divide the work among the four Liberals. We simply did not have time to study the bills properly."

Recalling that the local press had stated he would play golf in Victoria, Mr. Brown said there was no time for any such thing. In addition to participating in the debates in the House, he had his work as member of the forestry and municipal affairs committees which were two of the session's busiest.

"As a greenhorn, I found it quite an experience and education," he said.

Another special report at the meeting was made by J. T. Harvey on his recent trip to Vancouver as delegate to the B.C. Chamber of Commerce convention.

Mr. Harvey, who was elected first vice-president of the provincial organization and served on its resolutions committee, said that a rail link with the Peace River country proved to be a major topic. Fortunately, he added, the resolution finally adopted leaves choice of the route an open one.

At the Associated Boards of Trade convention at Burns Lake this summer, a route through Prince George was favored. By the resolution passed at Vancouver, any point along the CNR's northern line may be considered, including Hazelton, which has been boosted as a logical terminal.

Invite Friends For Chowder Supper

A CHOWDER supper can be a special treat.

Filled with warmth and goodness, a steaming tureen seems a symbol of hospitality. A welcome to your family and friends. Everyone gathers gladly around the dining table. Or they pick up their own chowder bowls from the buffet, then settle comfortably around the living room to feast and chat.

Grand makings for the chowder come right from your kitchen shelf. Creamy rich condensed mushroom soup or chicken soup as the base. Golden kernels of corn. Cubes of rosy ham or some leftover turkey to round out the chowder. How's that for a bowlful of goodness to savor with relishes (cranberry sauce and celery) and hot buttery cornbread? Wedges of pumpkin pie appear as dessert.

Mushroom Chowder

1 cup cooked ham, finely diced
1 tablespoon butter or margarine

The flag was received by Scout Edward Hinchliffe, senior patrol leader, and thanks were extended by Scoutmaster Roy Byrnes on behalf of his Scouts and he and Assistant Scoutmaster Ken Anderson.

Other members of the Rotary Club executive present were N. P. Baker, W. H. M. Collison, O. H. Hoskins, G. M. Jewell and D. Wales.

Three Scouts—Eddie Nicol, Laurie Moore and Johnny Brinkac—were invested into the troop under the new flag. The impressive investiture ceremony was carried out by Scoutmaster Byrnes.

Pow's Taunt Red Explainers

PANMUNJOM (AP) — Tough, jaunty Korean prisoners-of-war rejected Soviet "explainers" today by more than 96 per cent, turning Red efforts to win them home into a taunting, cursing attack on Communist interviewers.
 Many of the prisoners wore paper masks, traditional Oriental "devil masks" and caricatures of North Korea's premier Kim Il Sung.
 The explanations ended in less than six hours, with only 17 of 483 interviewed choosing to return to North Korea.
 Meanwhile, the Allies moved to break a deadlock in the preliminary Korean peace talks. United States envoy Dean asked for discussion of United Nations and Communist agendas with "the understanding that no agreement will be final until we have a meeting of minds on all."
 The Reds, after telling Dean he had proposed nothing new, said they would think it over and reply Wednesday.

Asks Revision Of Trade Pact

SEATTLE (AP)—Rep. Westland (R-Wash.) said he will ask the next Congress to revise reciprocal trade agreements to give the Pacific Northwest lumber industry greater protection.
 Westland said that while many Northwest lumber plants are shut down, large lumber users in the U.S. are purchasing Douglas fir plywood from Canada.
 "Price is the factor which has determined purchase from Canada instead of the Pacific Northwest," Westland said.
 "Until now, lumber demands have made the lumber industry strong. But now we must have a protective tariff to avoid unfair competition from outside our own country."

Miner Dies In Blast

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP)—An underground explosion killed one miner and seriously injured another Saturday near Wales, 100 miles northwest of Nome, it was learned here.
 James Allio, 27, Nome, was killed in the blast at the U.S. Tin Corp., mine at Lost River, only a short distance below the Arctic Circle and the northwestern-most point in Alaska.
 Word of the blast was brought to Anchorage by Kenneth Kadow, vice-president and general manager of the tin corporation who had been inspecting the mine.
 He said Allio and Paul Black, 35, of Mullan, Idaho, working together, were caught by the blast before being able to reach safety at the back of the mine.
 Black, in serious condition, is being treated at a Nome hospital.

Ben Matlock Busy Fashioning Floats For Santa Claus Parades in East

By ROD CURRIE
Canadian Press Staff Writer
WINDSOR, Ont. (C)—For thousands who line the streets of more than a dozen Ontario cities to view the annual Santa Claus parade, Ben Matlock is the nearest thing to Santa this side of the North Pole.

Ben is the paint-smearing genius behind the glittering $30,000 two-mile long display which kindles the Christmas spirit in young and old.

He and his helpers, working in a large building which resembles an airport hangar, handle tons of paper mache, paint, silver rope, wire mesh, wooden frames, artificial snow and multi-colored cloth to fashion several new floats and remodel some of last year's for this year's parade.

Sketches are transformed into 18 giant floats to equal in splendor even the most vivid dreams of youngsters who have followed the adventures of Cinderella, Humpty Dumpty and dozens of other fairyland folks.

With eight motorized floats hauling the other trailer floats they head first for Dearborn, Mich. During the last six years Ben has handled 100 parades in 20 cities.

PLAYS SANTA ROLE

Santa, usually Ben himself, rides a 50-foot, snow-covered combination truck-trailer on which is mounted the traditional sleigh and eight reindeer.

Other floats include a three-car candy train, Jack the Giant Killer, the Old Woman in the Shoe and her children, and Cinderella in a posh carriage. Ben draws many ideas from his library which includes probably the largest private collection of children's books in Canada.

He and his wife and three children live in a cottage adjoining the plant, situated on three acres of land in suburban Windsor.

Born in a small community near Kingsville, Ont., some 50 years ago, Ben started the firm of B. G. Matlock, Ltd., here six years ago.

He got the idea for the Santa parades after Windsor merchants paid $2,000 to import a parade from the United States. En route the parade ran into a hurricane and presented a tattered sight by the time it arrived here.

The following year Ben made some models and won the financial support of a merchants' association. The parade has been going ever since.

UNDERGROUND HUTS or bunkers are a new threat to lives of children in Windsor, Ont., fire inspectors say. This youngster, Gregory Pare, 1½, is in the tunnel entrance of one of the diggings, holding a box of matches. Fire inspectors said they discovered dozens of such bunkers dug by school boys.

BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

Can You Spot the Flaw in Miss Brash's Play?

See if you can spot the flaw in Miss Brash's play which cost her the contract in today's deal. The five of spades was opened, Mr. Dale won with the king and Miss Brash played the 10.

A spade was returned and Mrs. Keen ducked, fearing her king of diamonds was not a quick enough entry and believing her partner had another spade.

After winning trick two, Miss Brash led a small heart to dummy's king. She might have finessed the 10 but that would have lost to the queen and the defenders then could have cashed three more spades.

At trick four a club was led from dummy and the queen finessed. The ace of clubs came next and the king failed to drop, hoping for a miracle. Miss Brash led another club. But no miracle happened. Mr. Dale won with the king and led his last spade for own use.

As is often the case, success depended upon a slight and apparently immaterial change in the play after her unwaranted jump to three no trump. Miss Brash hardly deserved a chance for nine tricks but she had it just the same.

All she had to do was to play her queen of spades under Mr. Dale's king at trick one. Now if Mrs. Keen ducked the second spade, as before, the jack could be played from the board and that would be the vital second entry to dummy. Miss Brash could take two club finesses instead of one, bringing in the entire suit without loss.

It is interesting to note that Mr. Dale could have fouled up this line of play by dropping a low spade on the first trick and forcing Miss Brash to win. But that was practically an impossible play for him to make against a bidder like Miss Brash. After all, she might have been in there on a doubleton 10 of spades, and in that case he would look great holding up his king when his partner had led from five to the ace-queen.

Couple Drills For Gas Well In Back Yard

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Mr. and Mrs. John S. Weiss went right on drilling in their back yard today for a gas well they hope to strike—but whose output they cannot sell.

If they should happen to strike oil, a court order says they'll have to seal up the well and forget about it.

The couple live in an area where natural gas has been found in the past. Some time ago they decided to drill a "wildcat" well on their property.

At that point, municipal supervisors pointed out that zoning regulations restrict the area to residences. A temporary court order halted the drilling.

Judge William H. McNaugher later approved an agreement that permits the Weiss well-drilling to continue, with these restrictions:

If gas is found, they can use the gas themselves, but may not sell it without facing a charge of violating the zoning ordinance.

And if they hit oil they are out of luck. Any effort to transport the oil from the property would run afoul of the zoning laws and the well would have to be closed and plugged.

Ousted Official Being Queried On Beria Case

BERLIN (AP)—The United States high commission newspaper Neue Zeitung announces that Soviet authorities in East Berlin are questioning Wilhelm Zaisser, ousted interior minister of East Germany, in connection with the Beria case.

Laventy Beria, the Soviet Union's dreaded secret police boss and interior minister, was charged last June with treason.

Neue Zeitung declared "it is known" in Communist circles of East Berlin that the Russian justice minister thus far has lacked material on Beria's alleged ties with foreign agents to present at his impending trial.

A long-time friend of Zaisser, Beria once obtained his release from a Russian jail after the German had been made a scapegoat for the defeat of his international brigade in the Spanish civil war. Zaisser was known as "General Gomez" during that fighting.

Beria's 1953 directives to Zaisser were blamed by Communist leaders for the June 17 uprising by East German workers, a revolt that caught the Soviet zone regime by surprise.
