Let's Welcome a Fine Artist

OR those who enjoy music, it is time now to make plans to attend a concert next week which orings to Prince Rupert a woman who is ranked as one of the 10 finest violinists in the world. Since most of the others in the list are men, her accomlishments take on that much more distinction.

Frances Magnes comes here as the third erformer in the current Alaska Music Trail ries. Although the artists are of exceptionally igh standard, the season so far is not a financial success. One reason given for this is that it started too early with the result that many who usually attend missed buying their season tickets. Another suggested reason is that committee organization was slow in getting under way.

These are unfortunate circumstances but they need not be fatal. Two brilliant artists are still to be heard, and an active committee is now at work to ensure that they receive the attention they deserve. Tomorrow tickets will be on sale at three central downtown points as well as at the Civic Centre. They are also being sold by individual Civic Centre members.

The rest is up to those many others who like music and want to continue welcoming visitors who have so much to offer.

Frances Magnes does not know she is walking into a challenge in which the future of the Alaska Music Trail here may be at stake. She is coming merely to play her violin and to give all the great musical enjoyment of which she is capable.

So let us hope that when she makes her entrance there will be a large and responsive audience present and that she will never have cause to doubt Prince Rupert's pleasure in receiving her.

Is It "Me"?

OUEEN ELIZABETH II, according to a re-I port from her tour in New Zealand, heard two small girls near the royal car arguing whether the lady within was the Queen or Princess Margaret. "I leaned over," the monarch related, and said, 'No, it's me.'"

A generation ago a number of grammatical purists would have insisted, and probably some still do, that the proper phrase would be, "It is I." However, the "me" has long been accepted usage in Britain, and the National Council of Teachers of English once acknowledged it as also an American idiom.

Like other idioms, it won't parse, but is clearly nderstood. How explain, for example, why a Frenchman says, "Qu-est-ce que c'est?" (literally What is this that it is?") for "What is this?"? And how satisfactory would it be to try to straighten out the syntax of the well-loved Negro spiritual, "It's Me, O Lord, Standin' in the Need o' Prayer!

Actually, the Queen's "It's me" harks from ancient times as part of the king's English.

bers of tourists visited Canada's national parks and historic sites during the seven-month tourist season last year.

The influx continues during the winter months in those parks where there are winter sports, but officials stopped their count last October when they recorded 115,707 visitors since last April -an increase of about 500,000 over a similar period of 1952.

Most visitors toured the 16 national scenic parks where the land is left as much as possible in its natural state. All but five of these parks-located in every province except Newfoundlandreported an increase in visitors

Banff, which has grown from 10-square-mile tract to Canada's second-largest at 2,564 square miles, headed the list as outdoor attraction. It had more than 584,000 visitors, about 150,000 more than Riding Mountain park in Manitoba.

Banff was Canada's first national park. It was established in 1885 as a tract surrounding the mineral hot springs which still are a big attraction. From this small tract, the national parklands have grown to an area of more than 12,000 square miles in be added to when Newfoundland gets a national park.

The Newfoundland government understood to be considering Bonavista area on Newman Sound. It would be offered to the federal government free of encumberances and Parliament then would be asked to incorporate it as a national park.

Rangers Start Drive for Playoff Berth

By The Canadian Press The growls aren't audible ve snarling now that it looks as if straight. they're going to have a real battle for a playoff berth in the National Hockey League.

The fired-up New York Rangers are snapping at their heels and the Bruins can no longer hope to back into the playoffs.

The Rangers are a different outfit these days. The changes they made to hit on a strong, coordinated winning line-up have not been in vain and their new coach, Muzz Patrick, couldn't have taken over from Frank Boucher at a better time.

Last night, playing under Patrick for the second time the Rangers blanked Chicago Black Hawks 2-0 in the windy city and moved to within two points of the fourth-place Bruins, who dropped a 2-1 decision to the leading Detroit Red Wings in
