A Tremendous Contribution

ATE this month at Toronto, the outstanding anunual Canadian muster of Alcoholics Anonymous takes place. Officially, it is the fifth regional AA conference, but it is also viewed as the yearly yardstick to measure the now rapid growth of this unique organization. Well over 2,000 are expected to attend.

These numbers do not indicate greater alcoholism in Canada today, nor increased drinking. The vast majority are middle-aged or beyond, became hard drinkers in the "dry" twenties, and progressively alcoholic in the next 20 years. What is indicated is the rapidly spreading influence of an endeavor which sees alcoholics-under-control restoring greater and greater numbers in even remote Canadian areas.

In Prince Rupert the organization is an active one. It has a weekly program of events and is continually on the alert to assist those who have plunged past the stage of moderate drinking to a point where they have surrendered mastery of their lives to alcohol.

To diminish — if never quite to erase — the stigma which the Canadian public mind attached to Alcoholics Anonymous has been the hardest task faced. It was the big stumbling block. But at annual gatherings such as that to be held at Toronto, the number of men encountered holding responsible posts and positions of trust, the brilliant representatives of the professions and owners of businesses -each with at least three years of sobriety behind him-tells clearly that AA influence lasts, and is making a tremendous contribution.

There is far greater respect in Canada for these serene-faced, quietly confident people than there was three or four short years ago. The skeptics of only five years ago are silent. In other words, this fifth annual AA conference is a mile-post. Medicine and judiciary recognized the value of AA early, but it is only now, after 10 to 12 years of steady achievement, that Canadian public acceptance can be said to have won.

It was perhaps inevitable that AA should reach its present respected place in Canadian society. If it has a single success-factor it is unselfishness-an instant willingness to help others not found except in words to the same degree in any other Canadian group or movement. Its success is earned.

Record Number of Auto Licences Issued To Prince Rupert Citizens

A record number of licence plates for passenger and commercial vehicles in Prince Rupert, totalling 1,922, were issued in 1952, it was disclosed following completion of records

Of the number, 1,317 were for passenger cars. This figure compares with a total of 1656 licence plates issued in 1951, of which 1,110 were for passenger vehicles.

In Terrace, more licences were issued to commercial than to passenger vehicles, the ratio being 353 to 425 last year. I never stated that the Alcan project should not come into B.C.; all I asked was that the public should know what they were losing and what they were gaining, and that the flooded area must be cleared before the water started to rise in these lakes. The last government had recommendations before it from the Parks Department to the effect that the lakes must be cleared of the timber first. As you know, the last government did nothing.

sion well-taped up but yellowing clippings and drawings describthe original helicopter design, which, according to examinations since by aviation experts, included every requisite for successful vertical flight, such as retractable wings and rubber pontoons, vertical and horizontal propellers, a triple rudder and stability control.

Hull was born in 1843 in Peel County, Ontario, in a village now a suburb of Toronto. As a boy, he flew toy propellers from which he gradually developed the idea of an air ship which could rise vertically.

In 1881, Hull moved west to Souris, Mantioba, began farming with his two grown sons but his inventive instincts kept him more at the forge and drawing board than on the land.

Some of his farm implement inventions were forerunners of many practical devices such as self-binding reaper, a shoedrill and cultivator.

Several years of early frost in a row all but wiped out Hull's agricultural activities. He moved to town and began a horticulture business, planting the first fruit trees in that province and developing hardy varieties of apples, crabapples, plums and

Meantime, the farmer-inventor kept working out in his mind the details of a great flying machine. He made countless sketches on scraps of wrapping paper until he was convinced he had a workable plan. This he

But while on the trail of a financier who had shown interest in the fabulous creation, Hull succumbed to an attack of pneumonia as a result of a cold caught on the windy Chicago streets. He died after a brief illness and with him died the development of the helicopter to lie dormant for another 20 years.

Hull's patent drawings would appear curious today in the light of the modern-day "eggbeater" as the 'copter is fondly referred to by its crew members. But the ersatz design had included many practical features which are incorporated in the present-day Ltd. of Vancouver again has been incorporated at the provincial The machine's lift was provid-

Egypt is having mother-in-law mer.

Thursday the portly playboy off. virtually admitted that he is separating from his 19-year-old wife, Narriman, and that his mother-in-law is to blame.

Farouk's statement said bitterly that her decision to leave was "ably abetted by her mother, who was obviously in touch with Egyptian political elements." It's the first word from Farouk about rumors that something was amiss with his marriage.

Rumors gained ground with the arrival of Narriman's mother. Some said she went to Rome to persuade Narriman to return to Egypt with her baby son who is heir to the Egyptian throne since
