U.S. Action May Affect Wheat Prices

OTTAWA (CP)—The United States decision to sell surplus holdings of subsidized wheat in markets outside the International Wheat Agreement has brought repercussions in Canada's Parliament.

In a special Commons debate Friday, CCF members were joined by one Liberal in voicing concern that the U.S. action may force down Canadian wheat prices.

Trade Minister Howe, the cabinet minister responsible for wheat marketing, replied that Canadian prices will not be affected. The United States has the right to compete with Canada in world wheat markets and the government had "no particular objection" to this.

Walter Tucker (L-Rosthern) said Canada should tell the U.S. that nothing should be done "to break the prices of our product."

Regular business of the Commons was set aside at the request of M. J. Coldwell, CCF leader, to discuss the U.S. move, which he described as a "very serious threat" both to the International Wheat Agreement and to Canada's traditional market in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Coldwell said Canada should call for an immediate meeting of the recently formed Canada-U.S. joint economic and trade committee to seek "redress" of the unilateral action.

The U.S. move referred to was the Washington announcement earlier this week that the U.S. will subsidize a "limited" quantity of government wheat stocks for sale to non-IWA countries at IWA prices. The current IWA price is about $1.69 in Canadian funds.

Score Killed In Series of Plane Crashes

More than a score of persons were killed in three widely-separated air crashes Friday night and another nine are missing in a British observation plane which vanished during an Atlantic weather flight.

Thirteen persons were killed, one of them India's leading anti-Communist labor leader, in the crash of an Indian government airliner near Nagpur, India. Other victims were said to include a Frenchman and an American.

In the United States, a giant B-36 bomber, lumbering in for a landing through swirling snow, rammed into a mountain near El Paso, Tex., and exploded, killing nine men. Five of those aboard, including the commander, had parachuted to safety from a similar plane which crashed in England last February.

An RAF Shackleton with nine men aboard was reported overdue from a weather observation flight from Bally Kelly, Northern Ireland base.

In the Texas crash, the blast reduced the 10-engine craft to bits of charred metal. Wreckage was scattered over a wide area.

Twins Born Aboard Train Near Terrace

A CNR trainman, a porter and conductor played doctor this morning at the birth of not one, but two girls.

The twins were born to a young native woman of Kitwanga while the eastbound train sped between Terrace and New Hazelton. The first child was born at 1:20 a.m. and the second 15 minutes later. With Florence Tait, who was accompanying the mother, Conductor W. H. (Bill) Essex, Porter Tom Barzey and Trainman M. G. Stokes officiating.

The train was met by an ambulance at New Hazelton, and the mother and babies taken to hospital at Hazelton.

The young native mother had boarded the train in Terrace at midnight. She had accompanied the Kitwanga concert band to Terrace and was enroute home.

Only Two Survive Tug Boat Disaster

Engineer Clings to Lifeboat, Drifts 12 Miles

VANCOUVER—The story of a 14-hour ordeal in icy B.C. coastal waters was told today by one of the two survivors of a tug boat wreck, in which three sailors were drowned and two are still missing.

Captain Roy Johnson, 41, and Chief Engineer Bill MacDonald are the only known survivors from the C.P. Yonge, 75-foot tug which rammed a reef before dawn Friday and was rolled under by the prow of her overtaking tow, an empty barge.

Three bodies were recovered and a search by RCAF planes and naval, fishing and towing craft is underway. Mrs. I. C. Hartley, matron of St. Mary's hospital at Sechart, told of MacDonald's ordeal: "When the boat began to sink, MacDonald was pitched into the water. But he had his lifebelt on—all the crew did."

"After several minutes he managed to swim to a lifeboat which had been torn from the boat when it sank. He managed to clamber onto the lifeboat, which had a canvas cover over it and he could see the captain in the water, not too far away."

The two talked for 15 or 20 minutes and the captain kept waving his flashlight which was probably the reason he was rescued so promptly. "Then the captain lost consciousness."

"Several minutes later, the lifeboat turned over, but its canvas cover kept it afloat and MacDonald clung to the bottom."

The engineer kept his hold for nearly 14 hours and drifted 12 miles from the wreck scene. Then he lapsed into unconsciousness.

"He was washed ashore," Mrs. Hartley said. "He was found unconscious on the beach at Cape Cockburn, Neelson Island, by a Mr. and Mrs. Marshall, owners of the fishboat Howie."

Capt. Johnson was in the water an hour and a half. When searchers spotted his flickering flashlight, he was unconscious in his lifebelt. From his hospital bed at Pen-der Harbor, 50 miles northwest of here, he told how he had last seen his crew clinging to the small pieces of his ship.

Airwoman Won't Tell Reporters Of 19-Month Disappearance

VANCOUVER (CP)—"It's not a story, it's just my life..." That was Isobel Burton's answer Friday to questions about where she spent the 19 months she was absent without leave from the RCAF.

The 28-year-old former airwoman vanished April 15, 1952, from the RCAF station at Aymer, Ont. A widespread search followed. She was posted as a deserter and not seen again until she flew to Victoria Nov. 23 from California where she had been hiding "for personal reasons."

Brought to Vancouver, she appeared before Wing Cmdr. D. C. F. MacDonald, officer commanding Sea Island station. He fined her $40 and confined her to barracks for 21 days.

She was released Friday, two weeks before her sentence was up, "on grounds of compassion."

At her parents' home later, she refused to discuss the disappearance. "My life is my own and I'm going to keep it private always," she told reporters. "The air force has told too much already and I'm not saying anything about my past or future."

Wearing a red coat and white wool beret, she shielded her face from a photographer with an umbrella.

Discovery of Nonsense

DISCOVERY of nonsense, declared G. K. Chesterton, was the most notable discovery of the Victoria era. He came into Fleet Street at the end of that era and he continued the discovery well into the twentieth century with his light verse and paradoxical prose.

Chesterton was referring to Lewis Carroll's Alice in Wonderland and Edward Lear's limericks as classic examples of Victorian nonsense. But W. S. Gilbert, in his Bab Ballads and his libretti to Sullivan's operas, was at once the greatest jester and nonsense writer of the nineteenth century. He poked fun at kings and queens, at peers and policemen, and made a laughingstock of political quacks and highbrow artists and poets who "walk down Piccadilly with a sunflower or a lily in your medieval hand."

Gilbert, thou shouldst be living at this hour! What a riot of wit and humor the author of Pinocchio and The Gondoliers could have with the nonsense in the world today. The composition and proceedings of the United Nations make nonsense of the very name of that organization, with one of its principal member nations waging a cold war in Europe and hot wars in the Far East, while Vishinsky uses the platform at Lake Success as a broadcasting station for Communist propaganda. What could be more ludicrous than the presence in the United Nations' councils of delegates from a power that is openly in league with and supplying arms to a country that is at war with the United Nations? Being an astute lawyer, Vishinsky is well aware of the irony of the situation, and his satirical squibs at the western allies indicate that he is laughing at us up his sleeve.

The peculiar feature of Victorian nonsense was that the British were laughing at themselves, as revealed in the novels of Dickens and Thackeray, in the pages of Punch and in the stories of such writers as Jerome K. Jerome. During the same period Mark Twain and other humorists in the United States saved the American people from taking themselves too seriously. A revival of humor in the States is long overdue. The excesses of McCarthyism are getting funnier and funnier, and that monstrous word, "un-American," is in danger of indicting most Americans and Canadians also of some sort of misdemeanor. O for the saving grace of a sense of humor! It might even save mankind from the terrible nonsense of the atom bomb.

Ray REFLECTS and REMINISCES

Here and there are indications that Second Avenue is moving toward the status of what the founders of Prince Rupert intended the street to be—a thoroughfare of time to become an avenue of some consequence. The first 30 years have been the hardest, and we dislike saying it but somehow there persists the feeling that things will pick up, providing a fellow lives long enough and continues normal.

JUST ONE
The B.C. Medical Association is authority for the statement that just one male in a hundred, at 65, is financially independent. The other 99 are dependent wholly or in part on private or public charity. Nevertheless there should be millions who at 65 are able to perform all kinds of useful work, if not find time in which to clean up a tidy stake.

Oakalla will miss what it's been enjoying so long. The change of location, while not actually so far away, nevertheless means a hefty change from the standpoint of business.

I RARELY find myself in agreement with anything proposed by the Social Credit leaders. But in the debate, so far, I thought Mr. E. G. Hansell made the most helpful suggestion. That was for Parliament to screen all the thousands of suggested designs down to two or three—and then let the people pick their own flag. In 1946 the parliamentary committee eliminated all but two possibilities.

One was an improvement on the present Canadian red ensign by substituting for the mixed-up coat-of-arms one large "scarlet and gold" maple leaf. The other was a diagonal blue and white or red and white flag, with a large green maple leaf square in the centre.

The committee itself voted about two to one in favor of the one containing the Union Jack. But the French-Canadian members of Parliament circulated a petition against any new flag which did contain the Union Jack.

Under Which Flag?

THE House of Commons has fought the first round in the battle which will engage the new Parliament on the perennial question of the flag of Canada.

We listened to a dozen speeches on the question of the flag. But none of them got right down to bedrock on the real question, which is:

Will the new flag of Canada contain the Union Jack in the upper left hand corner or will it not?

ALL THREE opposition parties were having some fun with the Liberals because they knew very well that what the Liberals were saying in the speeches was not half so important as what the Liberals were leaving unsaid in those same speeches.

The resolution on the order paper called for the setting up of a committee to consider designs for a distinctive Canadian national flag. It is safe to say that 99 per cent—perhaps 100 per cent—of all the MPs are in favor of a distinctive, official national flag for Canada. But the resolution—like the speeches by the supporters of the government—sidestepped the real question. It was on that question that the Liberal party split, behind the scenes, in 1945 and 1946. There is no certainty that if the committee were set up the same split might not occur again.

The sponsor of the flag motion is Mr. Bona Arseneault of Bonaventure, Quebec. In his parliamentary speech he tried to face up to the question which is in the back of everyone's mind. He suggested that when Canada does select and proclaim the new distinctive Canadian flag the Union Jack should be simultaneously legalized as the Queen's flag for Canada.

In his speech he suggested that the Union Jack and the new flag should fly side by side, even from the same flagpole. But with all due respect to Mr. Arseneault's good intentions, most MPs know that this is just not a practical proposition.

Law or no law, large numbers of Canadians would continue to fly the Union Jack, whenever they felt like it. But law or no law, once a new Canadian flag were selected, it would be physically impossible to keep the Union Jack in a position of theoretical equality.

One was an improvement on the present Canadian red ensign by substituting for the mixed-up coat-of-arms one large "scarlet and gold" maple leaf. The other was a diagonal blue and white or red and white flag, with a large green maple leaf square in the centre.

The committee itself voted about two to one in favor of the one containing the Union Jack. But the French-Canadian members of Parliament circulated a petition against any new flag which did contain the Union Jack.

Steve and Nancy Santa Claus

The story so far: Steve and Nancy have written to Santa Claus suggesting they take his place at the North Pole to give him time for a nap before Christmas Eve.

CHAPTER II

"Nancy, wake up!" Steve yelled. "There's Santa Claus outside our window." And with that, he jumped out of bed and dashed over to where Santa Claus was still standing, smiling.

Steve opened the window just about the same time Nancy sat up in bed, still not sure what was happening.

"My goodness, Steve," Santa said. "I thought you were going to leave me out there all night." With that he swung his leg up to the window sill to climb into the room.

Steve and Nancy were so amazed to see Santa Claus at the window that neither one of them thought to help him over the window sill.

So there he stood with one chubby foot hoisted up to the window. "Well, give me a hand," he said. "Here, Nancy, you take one hand, and Steve, you take the other."

"Now, all together, pull-I-I-I!" Steve and Nancy were just little children, and both together they didn't weigh half as much as Santa Claus. And all the pulling and tugging in the world wouldn't lift that stocky old man into the room.

It didn't take long for them to find that out. They couldn't budge Santa Claus an inch.

Finally Santa Claus put his leg down. "Guess I'm getting too old for this sort of thing," he said. "Seems kind of silly to have to use magic just to get through a window, but I can't seem to manage it the ordinary way."

"Well," he sighed, "if I gotta, I gotta," and with that he put his index finger alongside of his nose and—Who-o-o-oops, there he was in the room standing beside Steve and Nancy.

"Now close that window before you cool off the whole house," Santa said.

He put his chubby arms around the children, drew them close to him, and said, "Children, I've got a big surprise for you."

"Golly, Santa," Steve said, "what is the big surprise? A cowboy outfit, maybe?"

"No. Something much better than that," Santa replied. "Every year before I leave on that long trip of mine Christmas Eve it seems like I have to work so hard that I'm all worn out before I start. Now, in that letter of yours was a wonderful idea. Know what I'm going to do? I'm going to turn over the job of being Santa Claus to you two for awhile so I can get a long rest before making that big trip bringing presents to all the boys and girls. It was certainly nice of you to offer to help."

Steve and Nancy didn't know what to say. They just stood there and gaped. Finally Nancy said, "But we really didn't think we'd get to be Santa Claus. We were just wishing."

"Well, that's what my job is, to make people's wishes come true," Santa said. "So get your clothes on and make your beds because we have a long trip ahead of us."

"But what about Mama and Daddy?" Steve asked as he put on his shoes. "We can't leave without telling them. Oh, they'd be awfully mad."

"Certainly, you must tell them," Santa said. "Nancy, before you get your nightgown off, go tell your mother where you are going."

So Nancy went into Mama's and Daddy's bedroom and said, "Mama, wake up." Her mother moved about a little and Nancy said, "Mother, Santa Claus is in our room and wants to take us to the North Pole."

"What's the matter with you?" mother said. "Waking me up in the middle of the night to tell me silly dreams like that. Now you go back to your room and don't let me hear another word out of you tonight."

Nancy did as she was told, and when she got back to her room she told Santa what had happened.

"What do you know about that?" Santa said, chuckling. "I guess there are some things that older people just don't seem to understand. I know that your mother has told you never to get into cars with strange people, but first of all I'm not a strange man and second I haven't got a car, but a sleigh and eight reindeer. So I guess she won't object if you come with me for a little while. "All ready, kids?" Santa said, moving over to the window. "Come on, then, let's go."

Athabaskan Returns Home

VICTORIA (CP)—The sleek, proud Royal Canadian Navy destroyer Athabaskan, veteran of three tours in Korean waters, slid into her berth at Esquimalt Friday under grey skies pouring icy rain.

But thousands of citizens, togged in raincoats, shouted a welcome from under a mushroom sea of bobbing umbrellas. The cheers were returned from the rail-lined decks of the Athabaskan as the crew returned to Canadian shore for Christmas.

There was a cloudburst as the Athabaskan, loaded with Christmas packages like a Santa Claus sleigh, nosed into port. It was the first rain the 200 crew members had seen since leaving Japan Nov. 17.

Children's Health Program Outlined at Teachers' Meet

Speaking at the monthly meeting of the Prince Rupert Teachers' Association, Public Health Officer Dr. S. F. Carr described public health facilities available for development of physically well and emotionally well adjusted children.

After outlining school health as controlled by the public health department, Dr. Carr stressed that locally the approach is to devote time to those who physically, emotionally, or mentally need special help rather than to superficially examine large numbers of children.

In a discussion period, Dr. Carr stated that it is hoped that all pre-school children will be registered next spring for medical examination before starting school in the fall. Dr. Carr then suggested several symptoms which would justify referral of a child by the teacher to the school nurse.

Earlier in the meeting, President R. H. Davidson introduced Mr. Sawadsky, a new teacher at Booth school.

Mr. Fiedler started work with CPA 10 years ago in Edmonton, Alta. He went from there to Fort Smith, NWT, returning to Edmonton in December, 1946, and in 1949 transferred to Port Hardy where he has been since.

His wife and children will join him here shortly.

In This Corner

By DICK AYRES

A communication we received this week advises us that fathers, husbands, brothers or boy-friends of any one of the 1,500 or so lady curlers in British Columbia might as well resign themselves to the fact that daughter, the "ball and chain," Sis or sweetie-pie are going to be among the absent this spring. The British Columbia Ladies' Curling association assures the Prince Rupert Ladies' Curling club that plans for the forthcoming Ladies' Curling championship are well underway. The biggest incentive of the 1953-54 season is the Eaton Western championship to be held in Edmonton March 15 to March 17. British Columbia will be represented for the first time by their provincial winner.

Each curling club may enter one rink for every 20 players in the Zone playoff and they will conduct a club playoff to decide which rinks are eligible. All club playoffs must be finished by January 15 and all Zone playoffs by February 15.

There will be six zones in the province each with a convener who will arrange the zone playoffs. Each zone winner will receive a specially designed crest. The Northern Zone which includes Prince Rupert, Smithers, Williams Lake and Prince George will be convenered by Mrs. Thelma Roine of Prince George. Other competing zones will be North Okanagan, South Okanagan, Kootenay, Coast and Vancouver Island. All Zone winners will meet in Vancouver February 20 to 23, 1954 for the first Eaton-sponsored Provincial Playoff. The prizes and trophy will be donated by the Eaton Company and they will also help with the entertainment. They will pay all expenses of the two rinks reaching the final including meals, hotel and fares. When the provincial finals are over the winning teams will have all their expenses paid to Edmonton where they will represent B.C. in the Western Curling championships. Included in the western finals will be Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia. If any further information is required, the central secretary of the B.C. Ladies' Curling association, Mrs. A. B. Porter, 3814 West 38th Avenue, Vancouver, is the gal to write.

Six Prince Rupert boxers left for Terrace this afternoon to take part in a mitt card at the Civic Centre there tonight. Under trainer Joe Ward's wing will be 135-pound Chuck Place to fight, so far as we know an unknown Irish lad, Billy Tsuchiya, who weighs in around 130 pounds who will also exchange pleasantries with another lad from the Shamrock Isle. Just why the Prince Rupert boxing club, sponsored by the Civic Centre, hasn't had more details is still a mystery, but maybe that's the way Terrace works. When a guy steps into the ring, he likes to know beforehand (a) the weight of his opponent (b) an inkling of the experience he's had. It's not stretching a point to presume that a boxing promoter or trainer of another club could provide these interesting statistics without breaking his neck. However, two gents who are guaranteed to provide the Terrace crowd with some excitement are Bill (Mouse) Morrison, presently reigning B.C. heavy-weight champ and Andy Marshall last year's lightweight titleholder. These two muscular boys will "have at it" in an exhibition which usually ends up in something akin to a brawl. Anyway one thing is for sure Andy and Mouse will give the crowd its money's worth. Also travelling inland are Martin Saunders with his 80-pound son Billy and bantamweight Don Turcotte who will fight Terrace lads in the prelims.

POST SCRIPTS—Tonight local cage fans should see lanky Norm Rolin in action with Watts and Nickersons when the clothiers take on Terrace. Norm has had trouble making Manson's practices and has been dropped from the jewellers' roster for awhile down to Inter A. . . Frosty's of the Girls' loop shouldn't feel so badly now, after what Dom's did to Rainbirds last night. . . Fred Calderone is in receipt of a letter from the Canadian girls' basketball champions Vancouver Ellers who want to know whether they can play a Senior B girls' team here. Since such a meeting with any girls' squad here would be somewhat, er . . . er . . . shall we say . . . premature, we think that rather than pass the Ellers up we should have them play an Inter A men's team. Furthermore, we think that there wouldn't be much to choose between the two teams.

Dom's Slaughter Rainbirds 38-5; Sailors and Sports Shop Win

Betty Vegg with 14 points and Leona Webster with 12 led Don Scher's Dom's Department store quintette to a lop-sided 38-5 victory over Bo-Me-Hi Rainbirds in a scheduled Girls' league basketball game at the Civic Centre last night.

Up the Boys' Junior loop, Sea Cadets won their third game in three starts when they edged Ormes 23 to 21. Lugin paced the sailors with 7 points and Duncan scored 8 for the druggists. In the second Junior league fixture Sports Shop leaped into the league lead when they crushed NBC Power 33-13 to push the powerhouse gang into the loop cellar. Bowes was the sportsman's top scorer with 10 points and Landie (eq) and Way scored 4 each for NEC.

Busy Week-End in Store On All Hockey Fronts

National Hockey League officials have found an answer to financial problems.

They levied fines totalling $375 on players involved in last Wednesday's Montreal-Toronto free-for-all and made it an even $400 with a $25 fine against Al Rolins for pushing referee Jack Mehlenbacher as the Hawks dropped a 5-3 decision to Montreal last Thursday.

Meanwhile the stage is set for another week-end of play.

Toronto fans will get a chance to celebrate Ted Kennedy's 28th birthday tonight as the Leafs entertain Chicago.

Detroit fans, awed by the news that the Red Wings haven't won a game in their last four, can be expected to turn up either for Boston Bruins' visit tonight or Montreal's appearance Sunday.

New York Rangers will be in Montreal tonight trying for their first victory at the Forum since February, 1950. Sunday they play host to Toronto while the Bruins visit the last-place Hawks.

Vancouver Canucks, Western Hockey League leaders most of the season, lost another chance Friday night to move again into a first-place tie when they dropped a 6-4 decision to last-place

Edmonton Flyers.

Some 4,000 fans saw Canucks lose their sixth consecutive game.

While Canucks were floundering, Victoria Cougars moved ahead on their home ice by skating to a 3-2 win over Seattle Bombers.

Tonight, Victoria visits New Westminster, Edmonton moves into Calgary and Vancouver tries on Saskatoon.

In the Okanagan Senior Amateur Hockey League Kamloops Elks walloped Kelowna Packers 9-4 and Penticton V's defeated Vernon Canadians 7-2.

In interior play tonight, Kamloops visits Kelowna and Penticton moves over to Vernon in the OSAHL.

Al Miller Downs Rusty Ford To Win Gordon's Hardware Cup

The coveted Gordon Hardware trophy was won by Al Miller's rink last night in a tense, close game watched by a breathless packed gallery.

The 13-end game between the Miller and Rusty Ford rinks was a classic exhibition featuring draw shots by the two skips throughout.

Ford had developed a 10-5 lead at the end of the eighth end and was looking for a perfect draw to win the game. Miller, however, was not to be outdone and drew a perfect draw to level the game at 10-10.

In the final end, Ford had last rock, requiring a draw on the 10, but Miller drew a perfect draw to win the game 11-10.

Muzzy's Unorthodoxy Baffles the Experts

There are several reasons why Mr. Muzzy wins now and then. Sometimes he holds practically all of the high cards. Sometimes it is because of what we may loosely refer to as his "style."

Often a serious and scientific player will not do as well against Mr. Muzzy as he would against another expert. In other words, he may well be thrown off balance by Mr. Muzzy's unorthodox bids and plays.

In today's deal Mr. Muzzy led the seven of diamonds against the three no trump contract. Mr. Heinsite went into one of the year's longest huddles before playing from dummy. Of course, there is no question about his being "scientific," especially when he is telling someone else how they should have played a hand.

By the rule of 11 he figured Mrs. Keen had only one diamond higher than the seven. He also figured Mr. Muzzy had six diamonds for his over-call and therefore Mrs. Keen had two. As you see, he was right on both counts.

But that wasn't enough. He also had to know whether Mrs. Keen held the king or queen of diamonds. If she had neither, then the play was to duck in dummy and let the first trick run around to the jack.

If she held the king doubleton or the queen doubleton, then the right play was to go up with dummy's ace. That would leave Mrs. Keen with a lone honor which would block the suit.

Mr. Heinsite had a cigaret going out in his mouth. When he remembered Mr. Muzzy usually leads the king from a long suit including the king, queen and three or four small cards—even against a no trump contract.

Mr. Muzzy hadn't led the king and therefore he didn't have both king and queen. One of those cards was undoubtedly in Mrs. Keen's hand. So up with the ace of diamonds and back with the nine of clubs which was permitted to ride.

Mr. Muzzy won with the king of clubs and rattled off five diamond tricks. He enjoyed this pleasant result merely by being himself—which is to say, consistently inconsistent.

Rupert Man Among Troops Coming Home

Special to The Daily News

OTTAWA—The last homecoming contingent from Europe to complete the rotation of the 27th Canadian Infantry Brigade arrived in Halifax yesterday aboard the SS Atlantic.

Included are more than 300 members of the 58th Independent Field Squadron of the Royal Canadian Engineers, and other Canadian Army personnel. Also disembarking from the Atlantic were 64 wives and 33 children of Canadian soldiers who have either married in Europe or lived there while their husbands served with the brigade.

Among the soldiers was A/Cpl. P. R. Lindsay of the 58th Independent Field Squadron, whose wife lives at 241 Fifth Avenue East, Prince Rupert.

Commanding the draft on the Atlantic was Major R. W. Potts, DSO, 31, of Kingston, Ont., officer commanding the 58th Independent Field Squadron for the past year in Germany.

Special trains met the homecoming troops to carry them to their destinations across the country.
