Russian Timetable Upset

A OSCOW may have manoeuvred itself into a VI political squeeze.

The rebellion in East Germany and restless stirrings elsewhere in East Europe appear to be symptoms of the internal Soviet ailment-insecurity at the top.

The Soviet Union's economic strength, that is, its swift pace in the strategic heavy industries as opposed to civilian consumer industries, seems offset by increasing political weakness arising from the unresolved struggle for Stalin's power.

Indeed, the shift from total dictatorship to committee dictatorship may have created an impossible situation that can be resolved eventually only by within or outside a coalition.

The uneasy transition from one-man rule to government by committee seems to have caused divisions and nervousness among parties in the captive nations.

The great Soviet peace offensive launched after Stalin died was an elaboration and extension of a peace offensive already in operation for a full year.

The new Kremlin rulers apparently depended on it to relieve tensions sufficiently to permit them to entrench themselves and to break up the sopid front of the West. But now the peace offensive seems to be getting in the Kremlin's way.

The Russians tried an experiment in East Germany to let off steam. They fell into their own trap. Trying to make a gesture to convince the Germans they had the right of protest, they permitted a coached, organized demonstration to get out of hand. It blew up into riotous rebellion and forced the Russians to wheel up the tanks.

A major gesture toward Germany undoubtedly had been planned. The East German riots gummed up Soviet plans, making Russian talk of German unification look like so much rubbish.

The Soviet timetable in Europe has been upset. If the West could present a strong and united front to Moscow now, it might well achieve real Soviet retreats.

Challenge To Britain

DRITAIN'S opposition Labor Party has outlined D a comprehensive new policy aimed broadly at reshaping the country's industrial and economic life to meet the changing world.

In a 20,000-word statement, covering virtually every phase of domestic activity, the party's national executive committee forecasts new nationalization, promises a vigorous attack on dollar markets, "particularly" those of Canada, and bluntly says recovery plans may involve sacrifices -of material benefits and cherished traditions.

The policy statement, entitled "Challenge, to Britain," is designed primarily as a program in event of a Labor government being elected, although there is no sign Prime Minister Churchill's Conservative administration plans a national vote in the near future.

On the controversial question of nationalization, the manifesto says Labor would take over "key" machine tool companies, water supplies, some sections of the engineering industry, aircraft factories deemed inefficient, the sugar beet industry and, if necessary, some farm land. Steel would be "renationalized" and road haulage brought back into public ownership.

Throughout, the theme is not necessarily nationalization, but nationalization if necessary.

The statement forecasts a 10-year program for British agriculture, designed to increase production by one-third in the first five years.

The manifesto also said the party should press for removal of United States trade restrictions and would favor a permanent sterling organization for joint planning among sterling area countries.

The party promised abolition of all health service charges imposed by the Churchill government and adjustment of social security benefits to any rise in the cost of living.

It expressed labor's opposition to commercial television in Britain, now under control of the BBC.

ONLY TWO leaders have a chance to emerge as Prime Minister of Canada after August 10--"Uncle Louis" St. Laurent or George Drew.

But the reality of Canadian politics is such that each of these two leaders has two chances for the Prime Ministry. If either the Liberals or Conservatives win more than 132 seats then the winning party will be able to form a government from within its own ranks.

It takes only 15 minutes from the time your fruit is prepared to make a batch of jam or jelly with Certo. It's the easy way because Certo is a highly concentrated fruit pectin product - the natural jellying substance extracted from fruit.

With Certo you use only a ONE-MINUTE full, rolling boil. You don't boil down your juice, so you average 50% more jam or jelly. You keep the lovely fresh-fruit taste and color, too. There's a separate kitchentested Certo recipe for each kind of fruit. Follow the simple directions carefully to be sure of sparkling, taste-tempting jams and jellies.

People who appreciate fine cars are turning to Monarch

"the kind of car Tie always wanted to drive"

It was Frank Wayland, a sales-manager I met last winter, who put me onto Monarch. He drives one himself and likes it so well he's always talking Monarch to his friends. He persuaded me to ask my dealer for a demonstration, and now that I'm driving my own Monarch I appreciate what a big favour he did me. This is the kind of car I've always wanted to drive. I suppose it's only natural to feel a kind of pride MONARCH FOUR-DOOR SEDAN in owning something as luxurious-looking as a Monarch-but there's more to it than that. If you haven't driven a V-8 before, it's quite an experience to feel this kind of power. It's so smooth you don't really know it's there—until you want it in a hurry. Then there's no doubt about it. Must remember to drop a line to Frank Wayland and tell him how right he was about Monarch. A sales-manager sold mebut the car itself is keeping me sold. After some thought, he won first trick with dummy's Realizing the value of dummy's spades as entries to the board, he didn't touch the trumps at this point. Instead. he cashed the ace and king of hearts. Going to dummy with a small spade to the nine, he led the jack of hearts. If Mr. Dale had covered with the queen, he would have ruffed.

When Mr. Dale played the nine, however, he dropped his last club, Mr. Champion winning with the queen. To prevent a discard on the now good 10 of hearts, Mr. Champion returned the suit and Mr. Dale ruffed. Mr. Masters overruffed with the jack of spades.

He now led a small spade to dummy's 10 and returned the que of clubs. Mr. Dale's play here was immaterial. If he had

Operation Squirrel"

WE KNEW ALUMINUM was used for artificial limbs, crutches and other aids to the fractured human frame. Now word comes from England suggesting still wider horizons for this versatile modern metal. Seems an animal lover of Twickenham found a squirrel with a broken leg and fixed it up with a pair of wooden splints. These his furry patient immediately ate. So he made two more, this time of aluminum. No more trouble.

It's just one more example of the seemingly limitless uses of aluminum. And it helps explain why Alcan is increasing its aluminum-making capacity in Quebec, and building a new smelter in British Columbia. Aluminum Company of Canada, Ltd. (Alcan).

Haylofts seem to be more effective for romantic scenes on the screen than boudoirs, says Tereasa Wright co-starred with Cornel Wilde in Columbia's "California Conquest," filmed in color by Technicolor and now at the Totem Theatre.

"My big love scene with Cornel Wilde in 'California Conquest' takes place in a hayloft," she said. "You wouldn't think pitchforks and lanterns would be a more effective background than the perfumed elegance of a boudoir, but people seem to remember the former scenes the longest." .

"There are many more accepted backgrounds for romantic scenes in films, of course," Tereasa admits. "The balcony is a tried and true prop which has been used for countless screen smacks. Even Shakespeare used a balcony. The rail of a ship has neen an elbow rest for a good many celluloid Casanovas, and the top of a windy hill has long been another favorite spot for romantic clinches."

However, the actress claims that none of these romantic like the romantic interludes in
