Criticism Too Late

NOW is the time for all good men . . . That appears to be the rule these days among certain Social Credit backbenchers of the B.C. Legislature in their bitter and often thoughtless condemnation of the Aluminum Company of Canada development in central B.C.

Now, at this late date, when the huge epoch-making project is on the road to completion, they think is the time to start their criticisms.

These good men, many of them for the first time in the public eye, feel it is time they said something of which they hope the public as well as big industry will take notice.

They cry about the Tweedsmuir Park flooding, about homes practically expropriated from settlers, and about the dangers of the Nechako dam breaking apart.

No doubt, that in some of the criticism there lies some truth, yet if these individuals now making latter day complaints of prior arrangements feel so strongly, they might have spoken up when the public was first acquainted with Alcan's plans.

But today, with projected completion of the first stage of the giant aluminum industry at Kitimat only a year or so away, it would be well for complainants to be on sure ground before pointing out to an industrially-conscious B.C. people that Alcan is little better than an ogre.

It is unlikely that a group of amateur engineers planned the Kenney Dam or designed a reservoir of water which can produce a million and a half horsepower of electricity. And the way is being opened for thousands to have new homes in the greatest single development of B.C. resources.

Parliament Hill

By Edward T. Applewhite, M.P., Skeena

It was with real interest that I noted that the film "Highway 16 (Prince Rupert to Prince George)" was shown in the Library at B.C. House, London, England, on the afternoon of February 11 (admission free). I hope a goodly number of Londoners were there to see for themselves something of the grandeur and beauty of Central B.C.

A couple of days ago I was down in Department of Transport (Air Services) offices. The hope was expressed there, (voluntarily as a matter of fact) that it would not be long before engineers and surveyors could be at work on Digby Island. Of course the item in the estimates under which this work would come has not been passed yet—but it will be; and in any event the money would not be available until April 1, the new fiscal year. But what encouraged me was to learn that this subject is actively before certain of the departmental officials, and they take a genuine interest in it.

Some things I fail to understand. I am here in Ottawa, meeting scores of MPs everyday. Now many professional columnists write about the time and energy spent here discussing or forecasting the next federal general election. I have seen or heard very little of that. From what little I do hear, I gather the Liberals expect no difficulty in returning with a clear majority though one, twenty to forty less than they have at present. What Conservatives I have met, seem to feel the same, although they estimate a greater reduction in the majority. Both the pro-Drew and anti-Drew sections seem to assume that Mr. St. Laurent will be our next Prime Minister.

I have had forwarded to me here, the letter which many of you will have received from F. E. Anfield, Commissioner, asking for support for the Prince Rupert District Boy Scouts Association. May I be permitted to add my voice to those of the Association; in urging every one to help this excellent work.

I have started the ball rolling in an effort to have a federal public building in Terrace. At this time, in my opinion, all that is urgently needed is that the government acquire a site, while suitable property is still obtainable. The new post office lease has still some years to run—but it is not a bit too early now to plan and prepare for the public building which will be a necessity by the time that lease expires.

In connection with the 1953 budget there has been an attempt to tell the little man that he has not received anything. Joe Dechene, MP for Athabaska, pretty well knocked that argument on the head in a speech which he prefaced by saying he was not a lawyer and has been rather pleased about that lately. At the time J. M. Macdonell, opposition financial critic, was attempting to prove the point, Mr. Dechene happened to be reading a document Macdonell had written and presented to the legislature of Alberta on March 17, 1953, when he was representing the mortgage associations of this country. Then, Dechene said, Macdonell wished to keep the farmer in bondage until doomsday—so Joe was not too impressed with this sudden interest in the "little man." In cold fact, an examination of the budget resolutions, will show a fair measure of relief—as great as is safe in our present situation—distributed through all strata of society.

As I See It

Old Mo Tough Baby

I FIGURE that Persia is the likeliest starting place for that much talked of world war three—if and when.

Right now they are having the fiercest of crises in Persia, or Iran as the folks there prefer to call it. But crises are an old Persian custom.

For the past two years Persia has boiled over with crisis after crisis—but every crisis starts and ends about the same thing—oil.

JUST TWO years ago, when I was out in that part of the world myself, they assassinated the then premier-General Razmara.

Razmara stood for a new oil deal with the British in which Persia would get a larger slice of the income from her oil. But three different groups ganged up against him. They were called the National Front. They all favored outright nationalization of the Anglo-Persian Oil company. But beyond that point they had nothing in common. The groups were:

Mossadegh's middle class "liberals," by no means "liberal" by our definition.

The Moslem Brotherhood religious fanatics led by Ayatollah Kashani. They don't know where they are going, but they are on their way. And how!

The Tudeh party, which like the LPP in Canada, is just the Communist party under another name, although Tudeh has the support of many people who do not know or care what Communism is—but only support the party because of clean-out-the-old order idea.

THE LATE BRITISH Labour government which had a good overall record, made its worst blunder by failing to come to terms with the Persians, in time. No British government would have had a really practical case opposing the principle of nationalization of any other country's natural resource. But for a Socialist government to attempt to do so was plain nonsense. The Persians could, and did, say something like this:

"If you can nationalize your coal, why can't we nationalize our oil?"

For months, while I was a fairly close eye witness, the Persian government was pleading with the employees of the Anglo-Persian Oil company to sign new contracts to work for them. These employees had direct orders from the British (Labour) government not to do so.

There is no use crying over spilt milk, or oil.

OLD DR. MOSSADEGH is a tough, grizzled and cunning politician. He is the only head of government I know of who has literally won his major victories in bed. Whenever the going gets too tough the old boy takes to his bed in the parliament buildings, and pulls the "covers" over his head. The "covers" being a loyal bodyguard, and the support of vast numbers of people, outside.

The danger of world war arising from Persia is obviously simple. In a chaotic situation the Tudeh party might take over the whole country, by force.

That might draw in Britain and the U.S. on the one side, Russia on the other.

Russia has, by clear treaty, the right to occupy north Persia if any outsider occupies the south.

Ray REFLECTS and REMINISCES

Boys are very durable. A boy, if not washed too often and if kept in a cool, quiet place after each accident, will survive broken bones, hornets' nests, swimming holes and five helpings of pie. After a male has grown out of long dresses, it becomes a boy and is Nature's answer to the false belief that there is no such thing as perpetual motion. A boy can run like a deer, swim like a fish, climb like a squirrel, bellow like a bull and eat like a pig. The world is so full of boys it's impossible to touch off a firecracker or strike up a band without collecting a thousand of them.

Another good test of blood pressure is to watch a man being liberal with the money he owes you.

Over the radio the other evening, Prof. Eccleston of Ottawa, born and brought up in Alberta, gave a talk on his early life. The address chiefly described what was called the short grass region and this was packed with interest. Years and years ago life in the short grass land gave a fellow a start. And incidentally, it must have been so good and short, at a cent an acre.

NO FADING
Vimy Ridge Bill says: "If you think old soldiers just fade away try squeezing yourself into your First World War uniform."

Elbert Hubbard's advice to young men: "Don't get groggy over girls, religion, art or politics. All fair in moderation, but an overdose can be reckoned an overdose."

THAT PORT UP NORTH
It would almost appear as if Vancouver was striving to have the rest of the universe believe it to be a perilous duty to have any business with the port of Prince Rupert, where pilots and pilotage might be concerned. True enough, we still have a few shortcomings, but when one reflects on Prince Rupert's general shipping record since 1910, what we can show is not grounds for criticism but reasons of praise.

A Victoria columnist says the Sacred government will cut civil servants' travelling expenses as well as trim cost of living bonus paid to recipients of old age pensions. It's only a few days ago a fresh uproar was heard in Ottawa about this $40 old age pension being too small and then some.

When the time comes, nowadays, to dismiss someone of more or less note, he is more apt to be "fired" than formally advised his services are no longer desired. True! To be fired is understandable, but somehow, since you're being discharged in this style, you feel like answering, "The --- you say."

OTTAWA DIARY

By Norman M. MacLennan

An atmosphere of cloak-and-dagger mystery is spreading steadily over Parliamentary circles these days with a density which seems to increase rather than diminish as investigation seeks to throw light on the situation.

The goings-on in the Department of National Defence are responsible. First of all there was the mystery of the source from which CCF Leader M. J. Coldwell secured a confidential copy of the now-celebrated Currie report. Now there is the question of the source from which Davey Fulton (PC-Kamiloops) secured access to a still earlier report on Defence Department shortcomings, alleged to have been made back in 1950.

The Fulton case is almost on all fours with the Coldwell case, since cleaned up by the jailing in Montreal of Fred Hensler, the printer with CCF leanings. But there is one important difference which is particularly disconcerting to the government. When Mr. Coldwell disclosed his possession of a first draft of the Currie report, the government was thoroughly familiar with the document and actually had it before it. But in the case of the report which Fulton alleges to exist, the government had no immediate knowledge and could not discover one in its possession at first search. A frantic combing of old departmental files over the week-end is reported to have finally located a copy in the neglected pigeon-hole to which it had been consign'd more than two years ago.

SECURITY LEAK.
The Coldwell access to the Currie report suggested disconcertingly to the government that the CCF had a dangerous pipeline into the Defence Department. The Fulton incident revives the same suggestion in even more disconcerting form. For the Tory departmental intelligence actually was superior to that of the government in the fact that it lit upon a document of which the government itself had no knowledge.

The disquieting aspects of such a situation are clear to even the dullest imagination. Conceivably no great national harm will result from the ability of the two Opposition parties to penetrate the National Defence Department security curtain. But if the opposition political parties are penetrating it so easily, what guarantee exists that enemy agents aren't having similar success in gathering more vital information? MAJOR ISSUE

It's that possibility that the Fulton episode to major importance. Actually, the report which he refers to underestimates have been made by a man, the government's employe, at the point isn't who made the report, but how Fulton learned its existence? That's what the government wants to know—is determined to find out.

G & A Cage Team To Disband

Gordon & Anderson, league-leading senior city basketball club, will be disbanded by coach Alec Bill when he picks his team to face the B.C. finalist in the senior B playoffs here early next month.

Bill said today he would retain three of his own players and pick two men each from Mansons and CCCs from which he'll line up his front string.

The three G-A players are guards Jim Flaten and Joe Davis, and Rupe Holkestad, centre. Members picked from Mansons are Micky Webster and Ray Spring, and from CCCs, Don Scherck and Glen (Tiny) Carlson.

That gives Bill seven players. Remaining three slots will be filled by other top scoring players in the league, to be announced later.

"But Webber and Arney will sit on the bench at any rate and so will Butch Currie. While these players put a lot of time on the bench during the season, they helped a lot at times and I can depend on them to stick with me next year," said Bill.

LOT OF WORRY

Winning the league gave Bill the right to coach the representative Prince Rupert squad in the senior B playoffs, as was decided earlier by the basketball association.

"But I had a lot of worry during the season from Don Hartwig's gang," said Bill. Hartwig, who had the tough assignment of playing and coaching a senior ball club here for the first time, pulled a number of remarkable plays which brought Mansons within one game of league victory.

On Saturday, G-As and Omegas begin their playoffs for city championship in a best-of-five series.

TOUGH FIGHT

"I can see a tough fight coming. This playoff is no cinch," said Bill.

The playoffs will be scheduled for each Saturday and Tuesday night until one team has won three games. If they do the limit, final game will be on Saturday, March 21.

Bill said that in picking his all-star team for the senior "B" playoffs "I must pick the outstanding players in the league. I think I've done this.

"We can't afford to use anything but the strongest combination in a series that means so much as the provincial championship."

The all-star combine will play under the colors of the Co-op Challengers.

When asked who he considered his outstanding player for the season, Bill said:

"There's been some good ball-playing this year. The league was closer than any I've seen. But I must say that Joe Davis was the toughest, hardest-playing man on the floor."

While scoring records have not yet been compiled, Davis is at least a top contender for high man, and also has played the full 40 minutes in each of the 16 league games of the season and the two tournament games last week-end.

Mount King George in the Rockies, with an altitude of 11,226 feet, was named after King George V.

Death Takes Jim Jeffries

BURBANK, Calif. (CP)—James J. Jeffries, former world heavyweight boxing champion, died Tuesday night. He was 77 years old.

Jeffries suffered a stroke recently. He had been in ill health for several years.

He won the championship from Bob Fitzsimmons at Coney Island, N.Y., in 1889, by a knock-out in the 11th round.

He retired undefeated in 1905 but was persuaded to enter the ring again for a comeback against Jack Johnson in 1910. Johnson stopped him in the 15th round at Reno, Nevada. It was the only time in his career that Jeffries had been knocked off his feet.

Hawks Move up With 4-1 Win Over Rangers

NEW YORK (CP)—Chicago Black Hawks vaulted into third place in the National Hockey League by defeating New York Rangers 4-1 in Madison Square Garden Wednesday night. Jim McFadden scored twice for the Hawks.

In moving one point ahead of the idle Toronto Maple Leafs, Chicago tallied twice in each of the first two periods while Rangers came up with their only score 45 seconds before the end of the game.

Ketchikan Boxers Here This Friday

An eight-bout boxing card featuring the cream of Ketchikan's youthful fighters and members of Martin Saunders' boxing club will take place Friday night at Annunciation gym.

It will be the first such contest between the two northern Pacific cities to be staged here.

Trainer of the Ketchikan Club is Pete Sanstol, former well-known Norwegian pro-fighter and runner-up to the bantamweight championship of the world.

Main event will feature Prince Rupert's Art Turcotte and Steve Beavy of Ketchikan in the 118-pound class. Other bouts are between the following:

Vic Prystay (PR) vs. Mike Wong (Ketch.); Doug Letourneau (PR) vs. Pete Rogers (Ketch.); Bob Dumas (PR) vs. Len Silvertson (Ketch.); Dick Bury (PR) vs. Leonard Booth (Ketch.); Billy Watmough (PR) vs. Jim Branda (Ketch.); Billy Smith (PR) vs. Ron Parta (Ketch.); and Billy Saunders (PR) vs. opponent to be announced.

BLACKWOOD on Bridge

Let Opponents Overbid, Cash in on Own Strength

Mr. Heinsite was shocked when his opening club lead was ruffed and bitterly disappointed when he set today's hand only one trick. Mr. Champion was disgusted that his partner had not made five diamonds. Mr. Muzzy was unhappy because his partner was criticizing his play.

Only Mr. Meek was smiling. He had been afraid his partner would get doubled and go for a big set. With the actual result he was relieved and happy.

After ruffing the lead of the king of clubs, Mr. Muzzy had snapped down the ace of diamonds. When the king failed to fall, he went after spades.

Mr. Heinsite ruffed the third lead of spades and returned the ace of clubs. Mr. Muzzy trumped this, went to dummy with the jack of diamonds, led the good spade and got rid of a heart. However, he still had to lose two hearts for down one.

Mr. Heinsite was so excited about the club situation that he got a little mixed up. "Why would you refuse to bid a seven-card suit, Meek?" he asked. "We had five clubs cold."

Mr. Meek replied, with considerable reason, that since Mr.

Stalin Played Major Role in Shaping World

One night during the "Big Three" meeting at Tehran in 1943, Stalin solemnly got to his feet at a dinner, looked soberly about him at the assembled military and diplomatic leaders of the United States, Britain and Russia and lifted his glass to American war production.

"Without American production the United Nations could never have won the war," he declared.

On another occasion, Stalin clinked his glass with that of President Roosevelt and toasted "my fighting friend Roosevelt." He repeated the performance with Churchill. The British Prime Minister, at a solemn ceremony, awarded Stalin the "Stalingrad sword" commemorating Britain's recognition of the heroic Soviet defence of that city.

Upon President Roosevelt's death in the spring of 1945, Marshal Stalin said in a message of condolence to Mrs. Roosevelt: "The Soviet people highly valued President Roosevelt as a great organizer of the struggles of freedom-loving nations against the common enemy and as the leader in the cause of insuring the security of the whole world."

But after the war a new Communist International organization was formed to seek to defeat the Marshall Plan for European aid and to fight "United States imperialism." This was known as the Cominform, or Communist International Information Bureau.

The Russian revolution of March, 1917, developed so suddenly that it found the Bolsheviks unprepared for the very event for which they had been agitating for 14 years. Most of the minor members of the party, like Stalin, were in Siberian prison camps. Lenin, head of the party, and Trotsky, his first lieutenant, were in neutral territory, waiting out World War I. Both had taken a strong stand against the war.

In the late 1890s of the Czarist regime, Stalin organized strikes, wrote pamphlets for publication on illegal printing presses and in various other ways carried the Bolshevik ideas to the masses.

It was under his direction that the first issue of the newspaper Pravda was prepared in 1912. "The Pravda of 1912," Stalin wrote on its tenth anniversary, "was the laying of the cornerstone of the victory of Bolshevism in 1917."

Stalin was jailed eight times and exiled to Siberia seven times between 1902 and 1913. He escaped from there six times. The last sentence was to the Arctic regions. There, in a closely guarded camp, he remained until the czar's overthrow emptied Siberia of its political exiles.

While in Siberia in 1903, Stalin received a note from Lenin—his first contact with the man who was to become Russia's leader and whom he was to succeed.

Trotsky made a bad guess in 1922 by refusing Lenin's suggestion that he become secretary of the Communist Party. The post went to Stalin, who saw in it the real power behind the figurative throne that Lenin had occupied. Lenin's post of chairman of the Communist Party was not filled after his death in 1925.

STALIN'S IRON RULE

There were many evidences of Stalin's iron rule.

Early in his regime the well-off peasants—the kulaks—who opposed his collectivization drive were eliminated as a class. It was estimated that more than 1,000,000 kulaks died of hunger after their grain had been confiscated.

Gregory Zinoviev and Leon Kamenev, who had aided Stalin against Trotsky but had later gone over to Trotsky's side, were executed. Many others fell like wheat before the scythe during the purges of the 1930s or disappeared from sight.

On December 1, 1934, Sergei Kirov, close friend of Stalin, had been slain in Leningrad. Executions for this killing passed the hundred mark. Zinoviev and Kamenev, tried with 17 co-defendants, pleaded guilty to participation in the murder plot and were sentenced to prison terms.

Later, however, the case was reopened. Zinoviev, Kamenev and 14 others were brought to trial in Moscow. All confessed that Kirov's assassination was part of a plot to wipe out all the leaders of the Soviet Union, with Stalin heading the list of intended victims.

They named Trotsky, then havened in Norway, as arch-conspirator. All 16 were executed. The Norwegian government, holding that Trotsky was a political refugee, refused to give him up.

A number of onetime chief Bolshevik figures were among those executed in the purge trials. Many others were imprisoned.

The uniformity with which the defendants on trial confessed to the most sweeping crimes and plots against the government and old comrades caused wonder throughout the world.

Until Trotsky was removed from the Moscow scene by banishment, expediency dictated that no action be taken against the kulaks.

But with Trotsky and his followers out of the political picture, Stalin started rebuilding the economic structure. Private trading was ended and a program for collectivizing the farms instituted. The five-year plan for industrializing the country was launched and modernization of the army and air force began. The kulaks proved troublesome. They clung to their land and, rather than surrender their livestock to the government, slaughtered it for a feast of meat such as the villages had not seen for centuries. They refused to send their products to the cities to feed workers in the new factories and ignored official requisitions.

Their opposition reached a peak when they planted only enough grain for their own use. Bread was rapidly becoming a luxury when Stalin's agents moved in, took the grain that had been raised as the government's share of what would have been a normal crop, and left millions of country people to face famine. Estimates of hunger deaths went beyond the million mark. "The kulak is the government. He is liquidated as a class," Stalin planned.

Stalin had a son, Yakov, first wife who died in 1917. He married 17-year-old Nadezhda (Allilueva). He was 40 at the time. They had two children, Vasily and Svetlana, in 1932.

Jacob was captured by Germans in July, 1941. In 1944 he was reported to have sent a message to his son from a prison camp by a slave officer who escaped after the west had been liberated. Vasily was a bomber pilot and saw throughout the war. He was a lieutenant general in the Red Army.

Persons May Make $9,760 Without Paying Income Tax

A provision in the federal budget could let a person earn several thousand dollars a year without paying income tax.

But a government spokesman says few taxpayers—if any—are in a position to use it to beat the tax man completely.

The provision is an enlargement of one that has been in effect since 1949 under which taxpayers could deduct, from personal income tax payable, 10 per cent of dividends they received from Canadian corporations. The tax credit now has been expanded to 20 per cent.

Purpose of the move, Finance Minister Abbott said in his budget speech, was to encourage Canadian investment in Canadian firms.

It was criticized in the Commons by M. J. Coldwell, CCF leader, and J. M. Macdonnell, Progressive Conservative financial critic. It was defended by Jean Lesage, parliamentary assistant to the finance minister.

With the help of accounting and economic experts, Mr. Coldwell calculated that a married, childless man with no other income than Canadian dividends subject to the credit could draw up to $9,760 a year without paying personal income tax. He would be exempted, too, from the two-per-cent special levy for old age pensions.

A finance department expert confirmed that Mr. Coldwell's figuring was just about correct.

As the CCF leader had it worked out, the investment income of $9,760 would be subject to the married exemption of $2,000, leaving net taxable income of $7,760. The normal tax on that would be $1,597.60 plus the $60 ceiling on the old age pension levy.

Above this, there would be the four-per-cent surtax on investment income above $2,400. That would be another $294.40, making a total of $1,952 in all.

But that $1,952 just equals the 20-per-cent credit on $9,760, thus eliminating the tax.

Mr. Coldwell called the situation "incredible," and Mr. Macdonnell said it would not be of much help to the majority of Canadians.

Mr. Lesage said it would take a "rather unusual—if not impossible" set of circumstances to bring about the complete tax exemption set out in Mr. Coldwell's example.

Latest available tax statistics, he said, showed that the average taxpayer in the $8,000-$10,000-a-year income group received dividend income of less than $400.

"There must be very few taxpayers, if any, whose tax liability will be cancelled by the 20-per-cent credit."

With this provision and corporation-tax changes in the budget, double taxation is eliminated on businesses with profits up to $20,000.

The sole owner of a small business could not escape tax, Mr. Lesage said. If he took his profits as dividends, the company would pay corporation tax. If he drew them out as salary, he would pay personal income tax.

The Philippine Islands, now self-governing, were discovered by Magellan in 1521.
