PORT EDWARD NEW INDUSTRIAL CENTRE

Splendid Location of Townsite Which Will Form Commercial Annex to Prince Rupert, B. C.
—G. T. P. Pacific Terminus.

Every day brings us nearer the completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. This is emphasized by the fact that passengers can now leave Edmonton at 10 p. m. in Pullman sleeping cars and arrive at Fitzhugh, Alberta, in the heart of the Rockies, at 9:20 a. m. next day and at Tete Jaune Cache, B. C., on the Fraser River, at 2 p. m. the same day, thus making the journey, which formerly occupied 37 days of continuous travel by pack train, in 16 hours.

With the near approach of the completion of the line—which the officials promise before the end of 1913—the eyes of the world are turned more than ever to the wonderful northern city, Prince Rupert, the terminus of this great transcontinental line, and destined to play a strong part in the history of commerce and industry on Canada's Pacific Coast.

Criticism has in the past been directed at Prince Rupert, to the effect that she lacks sufficient wharf accommodation. This is, to a great extent, true, the fact being that wharf space there is pretty well utilized now. But Prince Rupert loses nothing by that, owing to the fact that she is now to have an industrial annex eight miles to the south (but really next door, so to speak, owing to an impenetrable wall of rock), which provides ample wharf space and which also provides one of the finest sites for an industrial centre on the entire coast. This new townsite, Port Edward, has been laid out with scrupulous care by the most expert engineers and surveyors available, and on completion it will be a model industrial and shipping centre.

Port Edward, industrial annex of Prince Rupert, possesses an almost land locked harbor where modern wharves may be built at an angle of 45 degrees from the shore, there being a good bottom at a depth not too great to preclude the driving of piles to a considerable distance out. Excellent progress has been made with the work of clearing the townsite.

What Port Edward will mean to Prince Rupert cannot be accurately gauged now, but in many ways it will assist the coming great northern port to a position of importance it could not have reached without Port Edward. Prince Rupert and Port Edward, taken together, contain every natural advantage found in the best equipped harbor cities of the world and in addition offers facilities for the development of large and prosperous industries beyond the facilities offered by any other city on the entire Pacific Coast.

Geographically, Port Edward is located on the coast of British Columbia, fronting on Porpoise Harbor, eight miles south of Prince Rupert and approximately five hundred and forty miles north of the City of Vancouver, and fifty miles south of the Alaskan boundary.

There are two entrances to the splendid natural harbor of Port Edward, one on a straight line from Green Top Island to the mouth of the harbor, thence directly into the inside harbor, this range having a minimum depth of 3 and three-fourths fathoms (22 feet) at low water. The second entrance has two turns and a minimum depth of seven fathoms, or 42 feet, sufficient to accommodate the draught of any type of vessel afloat. At the head of the harbor there is a turning basin 1,800 to 2,000 feet wide, in which the largest vessel afloat might turn with ease and safety. In no place does the tidal current in this harbor exceed two knots per hour. When the proposed lock is put in at Zanardi Rapids, Port Edward will be the only harbor on the Pacific Coast with practically no tidal current whatsoever.

The Grand Trunk Pacific trains run through Port Edward, traversing its waterfront. By reason of its geographic location this port permits the shipment of cargoes west with a saving of many miles over shipments sent from ports farther south. It offers unusual facilities for shipment east to the Atlantic Coast over a railway built on easier grades and with fewer summits than any other transcontinental railway system on the continent.

The sale of lots in Port Edward townsite, which has been eagerly awaited by those who know of the possibilities of the new northern townsite, will begin very shortly. Messrs. Harrison, Gamble & Co., Prince Rupert, B. C., and Messrs. Hall & Floyer, Douglas and View streets, Victoria, B. C., are joint directing sales agents.

HOOLEY HAS LEFT PRISON

Spent 9 Months in Wormwood Scrubs

London, Jan. 15.—Ernest Terah Hooley, the financier, has been released from Wormwood Scrubs prison. He was met by a friend in a motor car, and the release was effected so quietly that nothing was known of it till the next day.

Hooley was sentenced to 12 months' imprisonment in the second division on February 10th last for fraud, and secured the usual three months' remission of his sentence for good conduct. Hooley's health was not good in prison, and a great part of his time was spent in the hospital. This did not mean necessarily confinement to bed, but it relieved him of hard tasks. He was chief alto in the chapel choir.

Hooley was indicted for obtaining from George Leech Tweedle, a young mechanical engineer, who had inherited a fortune of £45,000—six cheques for the payment of £2,000, with intent to defraud.

NATIONAL COMMISSION

Annual Meeting of Baseball Governing Body Set for This Week.

Cincinnati, O., Jan. 15.—The National Baseball Commission will hold its annual meeting in Chicago January 16th, according to an announcement by President Thomas J. Lynch of the National League. The date is subject to change, however, in accordance with the length of President Ban B. Johnson's illness.

At this meeting officers will be elected, annual reports read, and, it is said, a decision will be announced on two matters important to all minor league clubs.

At a meeting of the commission recently, at which Chairman August Herrman held the proxy of President Johnson, all the evidence in the requests of the National Association of Minor Leagues for a uniform players' contract was taken. Likewise, the evidence on individual salary limit of minor leagues was heard and taken under consideration. Chairman Herrman announced the evidence would be submitted to President Johnson, and that it was almost a certainty the commission would decide both questions at the Chicago meeting.

UNIONISTS ABANDON PART OF PLATFORM

London, Jan. 13.—Hon. J. Austen Chamberlain tonight expresses regret at the decision of the Unionists to abandon the plank in their platform regarding the imposition of taxes on food entering Britain. He states positively that he will adhere to it himself.
