SOAP

The appearance of certain words, the combination made by the letters composing them, as they strike the eye, in many cases visualize to certain minds their meanings, quite apart from their etymology, or accepted sense. Some words look when printed as pleasant as they mean, while other words look as mean as they really do mean. Soap is not one of the particularly pleasant words to look at. The appearance of the two vowels between the two consonants does not appeal to one's aesthetic susceptibilities. Neither, until recent years, did propinquity to a soap factory appeal to the other senses to any degree. In fact, like a tan yard, it was one of the places to get away from quick.

Science, however, to a great extent has improved factory conditions, and in the most modern boiling shop, so far as effluvia is concerned, it does not exist. But even to see soap boiling does not increase one's respect for the great cleanser. As the great big lazy bubbles come to the surface, as the alkali combines with the fatty acids in the boilers, the whole appearance of the yellow viscid mass inspires a feeling of disgust, rather than pleasure, which doubtless accounts for the indifferent appearance of the four letters combining to make the word.

Soap, however, is going up in price, according to dispatches from Toronto. This is one of the bad habits of soap. It has had a tendency in this direction for the last six or seven years. There have been reasons of course for this, as well as excuses. Cost of materials is the stock one, which covers a multitude of others. Profits, of course, must be maintained, too, by the manufacturers, which is the real reason.

It will be remembered that several years ago, in Great Britain there was a great scare about the alleged "soap combine." Who is now Lord Northcliffe, who, it was said, attempted a press combine, got out after the Levers of Port Sunlight, in his numerous newspapers, and showed up the scheme. It cost the lord something in the courts afterwards, though. The "combine" was denied at the time, but the fact remains that the Levers bought up some firms, entire, in others acquired a controlling interest, and at the same time, started new ones. This system of acquisition went on until not so long ago Sir William Lever, speaking at one of his meetings, informed his audience that then they had something like eighty-eight of these subsidiary companies scattered around the globe. That was some years ago, and there is no saying how many more they have secured since that time.

The soap trade, it would appear, has become one grand sweet song chorusing the pleasures of associating with Lever. You may buy soap with many a manufacturer's name upon it, but it may be one of Lever's companies, and even in Canada too. If he does not own it, he may control it, nevertheless.

While there is no doubt that big production in this fashion and co-operative buying all tends towards cheap production, it also tends towards larger profits for the manufacturers. Soap makers nowadays grow their own cocoanuts for the oil they boil. They manufacture their own soda out of their own brine. Their own tank steamers bring the oil from the uttermost parts of the earth to their factories. To a large extent, they are a self-contained entity in manufacture, so far as it is possible to be. But it all comes down to this, that it will soon be that no one can wash their face unless to the glory and for the profit of the one company, and company of companies.

From the modern point of view, this is the stage to which all industries will eventually be brought. When instead of competition between different firms in the same line of trade, there will be co-operation instead, tending towards cheaper production and higher profits. But from the radical point of view, the end would be cheaper pro-

Insomnia Cured Without Drugs

Internal Bathing Relieves the Cause

If you do not sleep there is always some cause. Don't start dosing with drugs. Nerves can't consume them. Relieve the cause and a good, sound sleep will be the result.

The system cannot be right if the Colon or large intestine is not kept clean and free from all waste matter. Bathe internally if you want perfect health. Mr. F. C. Voigt, Rapid City, Man., writes:—"For several years I suffered from Indigestion, Nervous Debility, Insomnia and Constipation. Had no appetite, and doctors did not expect I would live throughout the winter. Your book interested me. I got a 'J. B. L. Cascade' and in a few days obtained remarkable results. I now sleep and enjoy my meals better than for years before. I regard the 'J. B. L. Cascade' as a Godsend to me."

The "J. B. L. Cascade" is a perfected appliance for Internal Bathing, invented by Dr. Chas. A. Tyrrell of New York, and has been the means of restoring thousands to perfect health. It is shown and explained by Cyril H. Orme, Druggist, cor. 3rd Ave. and 6th St., who will be pleased to give you an interesting book called "The What, The Why, The Way of Internal Bathing" on request. Ask for it.

THE GERMAN SENSE OF HUMOR MAKES TROUBLE FOR THE HUMORIST

Amsterdam, February 11.—The artist who designed the paper money of the denomination of fifty pfennings which is now being circulated in several rural towns of Prussia, has been arrested at Niebertahnstein on the charge of holding up the Fatherland to ridicule. His offence lay, according to The Maasbade, of Rotterdam, in the designing of the ornamentation on the margin of the bills.

After the money had been in circulation for some time it was discovered that the margin decorations consisted mostly of drawings of articles of food. Above a picture of a ham the artist inscribed in microscopic letters, "A tender memory and a fond hope." Over a design of three turnips he wrote: "This is how the Germans live."
