Making Plans for Building Houses.

Now that the elections are over it will be well for citizens to begin to consider how they are going to house the people who may be expected to come here during the next few months. The demand for houses will be very great and there is talk of knock-down shacks and all sorts of fragile structures to accommodate the workmen at the new plant.

That there are a number of contractors and others already considering the scheme is well known. Already figures are being obtained for lumber and building and it is found that the houses can be built locally much better than by bringing in ready-made houses.

The biggest demand will be for four and five roomed cottages. Besides this, however, it will be necessary to have some of the better class of dwellings for which people will be willing to pay larger rents. Right now there is a demand if the prices are not too high.

Prices of Lots Must Not be High.

Those who own lots and who wish to sell must not expect to get enhanced prices, for workmen cannot afford to pay any fancy figures for houses and lots. The lots on which workmen's cottages are built should not cost much more than two to three hundred dollars or else the rent comes too high. Prince Rupert must be made a place where people can live as cheaply as elsewhere or perhaps a little cheaper. That is the only way to attract workmen. Big prices for everything will only drive people away.

Those who have the interests of the town at heart will try to keep prices down to a reasonable level. The grocers are already doing that. During the Christmas holidays things were cheaper here than they were in Vancouver or Victoria. We still charge high for a few luxuries but the prices will reach a normal level when the influx comes and there is more competition.

Kissing the Book Relic of Barbarism.

Kissing the bible is one of the relics of barbarism which have come down from the days when the people were ignorant and worshiped the bible. Today there is still a little superstition surrounding the book which causes people to cling to the custom of kissing it when taking the oath.

The custom of kissing a book is one of the most silly things that can be done. It brings the courts into ridicule and contempt and makes the lawyers and judges seem anything but dignified, while at the same time it adds nothing to the value of the oath. To swear with the uplifted hand is much more sane. That was done by one of the witnesses at the assizes but he had to be asked in a severe tone if he did it for conscientious reasons.

Not only is the custom of kissing the bible ridiculously superstitious but it is also horribly insanitary. To kiss where some other dirty dips have preceded and perhaps to carry away the germs of disease is hardly in keeping with the needs of justice. It is almost as bad as locking young boys or girls in prison along with hardened criminals. It is not necessary.

Perhaps there will come a time when lawyers will get rid of this relic of the past. It should have gone along with the wig. If they refuse to do it, the public will have to protest and see that the law makers do their duty in regard to it.
