Bottom Depth Touched By Stayathome.

Editor The News,-In its reception to returned men Prince Rupert does not shine very well, but surely the bottom depth is touched when "Stayathome" grudges the ex-soldier the glorious privilege of getting a job. That there is plenty of work here for all does not appeal to him since he believes in the traditional Thursdays and Saturdays at 8 p. policy of belauding the fighting man in wartime and starving him when the danger is past.

Your disgruntled correspondent has suffered so much during want. See the classified column the war that I suggest that he and his fellow sufferers-there are on Page 5. others of his kidney-should be presented with the addresses of welcome originally designed for the men who are having the fun in France. These men apparently all basely deserted Prince Rupert during the bad times to live a life of riotous enjoyment "over there" on the comforts supplied by the gallant hero who bravely carried on and starved over here. If he truthfully states his share it will be found that he once by mistake paid a dime for a tag instead of a nickel and has ever since been sore.

Was An Insult To Men Who Died.

The fact that the boys who were fortunate enough to come back minimize the horrors and emphasize the bright spots of their army life gives no featherbed civilian the right to describe their experiences as fun. They have no wish to paint the horrors of war, which are inconceivable by any civilian and indescribable by any soldier, but the memories of their dead comrades, who fell among the mud and awful desolation of Flanders and on the chalky ridges of northern France, makes the suggestion of fun in that connection an insult, both to the men who died and to those who came back. A soldier had to laugh in the face of death; if he had not laughed he would have gone mad. What hardships our civilian friend suffered we know not, since everyone seems to have enjoyed three square meals a day and a bed to lie on. Poolrooms and cabarets seem to have male for a Certificate of Indefeasible Title flourished in spite of there being a war on. In view of the suffer- of Thomas McManamon ings and privations of the poer people of Belgium, Serbia, northern France and Italy, the people here lived in Paradise.

Repatriated

Civilians.

One of the strongest memories the boys have is that of the scenes on the Cambrai-Valenciennes-Mons roads, when the re- proceedings to establish your claim, if patriated civilians were trudging back in search of what remained proposed action on my part. of their homes-mostly crumbied brick and mortar. Old grannies and granddads, frail women and toddling wee things ploughed bravely through the mud and the throng of advancing troops, pushing barrows and handcarts containing their all.

Notwithstanding the toil and the miserable conditions these people had smiles on their faces and thanks from their hearts to the men from far off Canada, for they felt that their night of sorrow was over and the dawn was at hand. These scenes, brought tears to the eyes of many a hardened warrior and every man did his utmost to help the weary pilgrims on their way. And "Stayathome" talks of hardships in Prince Rupert!

Men Who Joined Were Good Citizens.

The men who joined up were not bums nor men out of a job, but some of Prince Rupert's citizens who left business and good jobs when the call came. On ceasing to be soldiers it is to their credit that they so speedily resume their citizenship "Nothing is too good for the soldier" was a common phrase during the war, and your correspondent agrees with the word if not with the spirit by wishing to offer less than nothing plus a little spite and jealousy .- "SCOTTY."
