ROTARY FIELD DAY POPULAR

Games and Races Attracted Many People to Acropolis Grounds

After their luncheon yesterday, members of the Rotary Club marched off behind the bag pipes to Acropolis Hill for their field day and sports program. A fair sized crowd was present at first to witness the sports but, later in the afternoon, there were a great many more who took advantage of the opportunity to see the games and they became very much interested in the baseball game between the Rotary and Gyro Clubs which lasted well past six o'clock and resulted in a 14-13 victory for the Gyros. The kiddies were present in fair numbers and enjoyed the ice cream and lemonade and other refreshments dispensed by John Dore and Jim Steen. The committee of arrangements had things well in hand and there was no hitch in the whole program, each Rotarian assisting to carry out the several items with despatch. The junior baseball over with Booth School defeating Borden Street 17 to 4 track and field sports were run off in good order. The winners in the various races were as follows:

Boys 7 and under— 1, Billie Williscroft; 2, Lloyd Ivarson; 3, Hugh Forest.

Boys 9 and under— 1, Billie Williscroft; 2, Edwin Johnson; 3, John Millerd.

IMMIGRATION MUCH TO FORE

Western Manager of C.N.R. Gives Impressions After European Trip

WINNIPEG, July 24. — Delighted with the warmhearted reception which had been given everywhere to the delegates to the International Railway Congress to which he was one of the two representatives from the Canadian National Railways, A. E. Warren, general manager of the western region, has returned to Winnipeg after an absence of two months. The congress, Mr. Warren stated, had been a great success, bringing together as it did railway men from all parts of the world. For discussion of various problems; the delegates had been tendered warm receptions on every hand and were more than pleased with the kindnesses. Great interest had been shown by delegates from other countries in the work of the Canadian National, and in the progress which these lines were making under public ownership.

During his stay in England, Mr. Warren visited the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley and found visitors there greatly impressed by the showing which Canada was making.

The Canadian government buildings and others including the Canadian National Railways Pavilion, were crowded during most of each day and great interest was shown on all hands in the development of the Dominion from all angles.

The continuance of unemployment in Britain, where there are still more than one and a quarter million out of work, had of necessity brought emigration very much to the fore, and Canada was attracting a great deal of attention from those who were desirous of finding a place where they could build up homes and futures for themselves. The success of the scheme of settling British families on the land in western Canada had heartened the people of the Old Country considerably and reports reaching the other side from newcomers had done much to offset unfavorable propaganda and place the truth about conditions here before the people of Great Britain.

S. J. Hungerford, vice-president of the C.N.R., in charge of operation, was the other delegate to the International Congress. He returned with Mr. Warren to Montreal at the end of last week.

NINE STRIKES DURING 1924

Report Issued on Labor Disputes by Deputy Minister

VICTORIA, July 24. — The labor disputes which occurred in British Columbia in 1924 were nine in number, and a report submitted by the Deputy Minister of Labor, J. D. McNiven, to the Honorable A. M. Manson, minister of labor, states that 3,470 workers were affected, the resulting loss of employment being no less than 223,876 days.

The principal area of disturbance was the south-eastern interior, where the two most serious disputes were witnessed, both of them presenting certain unusual features. One was caused by the calling out of the men of the logging camps by the I.W.W. early in the year, and the other was the dispute which led to the coal miners, in common with those of Alberta, giving up their employment for several months in defence of a wage list which was, in a sense, a survival of conditions brought about by the settlement of war-time disputes.

Mines Dispute

The terms of settlement in the mines dispute were a reduction in wages of $1.17 a day in the case of contract miners, and of 12½ per cent for those on day wages. At the time the settlement was arrived at, the representative of the principal Company affected in the Province expressed a doubt as to whether his Company would be able to operate their mines and pay even the reduced scale of wages which had been accepted. For a few weeks work was done with a partial crew, after which the Company again closed down the mines. This brought about a new crisis of a disturbing character.

In the meantime negotiations were opened up unofficially to ascertain the conditions, as to wages, under which the Company would feel warranted in resuming operations. A scale of wages was drawn up, which it was understood the Company would be prepared to accept, and which was lower than the scale agreed upon in October. On December 6 a meeting of miners was held, and it was decided to break away from association with the United Mine Workers of America, and form a Canadian organization of miners. Subsequently the terms which the Company were willing to agree to were submitted to another vote of the miners, and were accepted by 385 to 21. Under these conditions a partial resumption of work was made on the 22nd December. It was agreed that the new scale of wages should be operative for a period of three years and three months.

Referring to the dispute affecting lumber workers in the Cranbrook district at the beginning of the year, the report says one result of the strike was the extension of the "gyppo" system, under which a small group of men contract to carry out certain work on a plan which provides for payment by results.

Other Strikes

The other strikes in the Province during the year were of comparatively short duration.

The report also speaks of important work of conciliation which was carried on by the Department of Labor during the year, in cases where events appeared to be tending towards a rupture of peaceful relations between employers and employed, and gives details of the steps which were taken to preserve harmonious relations. These included the settlement of the difficult task of reconciling a dispute in a sawmill at Victoria, by restoring part of a cut which had been made in the men's wages. In September last the Deputy Minister of Labor had the difficult task of reconciling the claims of employers and employed in the coal mines of Nanaimo and succeeded in finding a basis of agreement. Another dispute was threatened over the question of whether carpenters in Vancouver should be paid at the rate of $6.50 or $7.00 a day, but the Deputy Minister, after full investigation, decided in favor of the higher figure, contractors for the Government, who were affected by the Fair Wage clause, being directed to pay at this rate.
