

ELECTRICITY AND THE FARM

Electricity is Not Yet Accomplishing all it Can for Agriculture

The day has long since passed when the farm was cut off from all the comforts of city dwellings, but the day has by no means yet completely dawned when electricity is accomplishing all that it can accomplish for agriculture, says the Christian Science Monitor editorially.

The reason for this is largely the great cost involved in the use of this form of power. A farmer must pay $500 to $1,000 cash in advance to get his farm equipped for service and does not own the equipment at that, and, if on top of that he must pay from fifteen to twenty-five cents a kilowatt hour for the current, it makes the cost of the service so high that it absorbs all the advantages.

It is with this thought in view that the Public Ownership League of America has published an article on the subject of "Electricity on the Farm." What is needed, it says in part, is electric power for the farm at cost, "and the cost kept down to the minimum." It urges that there are five ways in which such a result can be accomplished. These are municipal service, co-operative public ownership, rural power districts, state ownership, and federal power systems. And it states that, for details regarding any one of these methods, or for copies of bills and data as to the achievements and the tremendous possibilities in this field, interested parties are referred to the Public Ownership League of America, with headquarters in Chicago. Electric power at cost, it is the contention, well based, apparently, on facts, will revolutionize conditions on the farm and restore American agriculture to its proper place in social progress and prosperity.

COURTS ARE NOW MORE TOLERANT

Petting and Cocktail Parties, Nude Dances, etc., Win Recognition

NEW YORK, July 22.—The extent to which the invading manners and customs of a new generation have been accepted as part of the modern scene has been strikingly reflected, in New York at least, in that traditional last resort of conservatism—the court.

Many of the new practices—the public petting party, the cocktail party, the "nude art dance" and its older and somewhat out-dated sister, the "hootchie-kootchie"—have won recognition and toleration in judicial decisions.

One magistrate summed it up in a dictum that years ago such conduct "might have been wrong, but now the people want it."

Max D. Steuer, one of the leading members of the New York bar, in a divorce suit said the "lounge lizard" has become a "welcome consort for wives of tired business men," and conduct which a few years ago would have branded a married woman as a social outcast is now accepted as conventional.

Women's Rights

"Women's rights have grown," his brief stated, "and their political franchise is only a part of their privileges and prerogatives. Cocktail parties are given almost daily in social circles like those in which both plaintiff and defendant lived. So-called petting parties are no longer a badge of meretriciousness or cause for social ostracism."

Justice Ford heard testimony that the woman defendant in the case and a co-respondent had been seen breakfasting together in negligee, and kissing, and that she spoke of "cocktail parties" they had attended.

The Justice, who has taken an active part in campaigning against indecent literature declared: "Many things the girls and young women do nowadays are so easily misconstrued, especially by us old fellows, and yet they are perfectly harmless." As for "cocktail parties," he added, "why, even my daughter tells me about them."

a chorus in fights. The other day a New York magistrate ruled that, in a certain current production in which a young woman appeared in raiment "so scant and frail as in law to be ignored," exposure of the person was not unlawful.

Common Exhibitions

"A society is not corrupted," Magistrate Gordon held "by exhibitions, to which it has become quite accustomed and which it accepts as common." He pointed out that "the whole effect is not unlike that which may be seen in paint, marble, or bronze, in nearly every art gallery."

Magistrate Brodsky applied the morals of Broadway to the less expensive Eight Avenue theatres.

"The poor man wants to see the young ladies shake the shimmy as well as does the rich man," he declared. "Years ago such a performance might have been wrong. But now the people want it."

Not so long ago, the stage seldom echoed anything stronger than "by crickety." After vaudeville had led the way, the legitimate theatre began to produce plays with "realistic dialogue." Certain plays attract large crowds partly because of the fame of their "shockers."

Social Decadence

Pulpits rang with denunciations of the "social decadence" revealed at the Thaw trial; yet the episode of Earl Carroll's recent "bath party" passed in comparative silence as far as it concerned the attendance of prominent men and women.

Indignation last year revived the play jury system to pass upon the alleged obscenity of Broadway productions. This year only three charge were brought against performances. Only one resulted in a conviction.

Magistrate Gordon in the "Broadway Eye" case, summed up with the statement: "While a prudent court might be shocked, I am inclined to hold that present-day standards do not reasonably permit of condemnation."

Mrs. Frank Dibb and daughter, Miss Winnie Dibb, will sail Saturday evening on the Prince George for Vancouver on a holiday visit. Miss Dibb, who is a member of the hospital nursing staff, has been ill lately.

PRINCE RUPERT BEATS CURLEW

Scored Another Football Victory By Winning 2 to 1 Last Night.

In a good game of football at the Acropolis Hall grounds, last night before a large crowd of fans, the Prince Rupert city team again defeated a team from H. M. S. Curlew by a score of 2 goals to 1. Both teams showed improvement in play over the previous game and some good combination was displayed.

The sailors kicked off with the grade in their favor and took due advantage of it. After a series of tussles, the Jackies worked the ball up the field when their centre forward made a beautiful drive from some 25 yards out and landed the ball right in the corner of the net. At half time the score stood 1-0 in favor of the sailors.

In the second half the city team took the initiative, and speaking generally, had the better of the play. Sam Currie, playing at centre half for the city, made a neat drive when some distance from the opposing goal and beat the sailor's custodian by placing the ball in the corner of the net. As the result of a corner kick, Norrington, in the city's forward line, made a great kick and was successful in placing the ball, with a fine screw shot, right in the corner of the Jackies' stronghold.
