LIBERAJ'S NOMINATE IN WESTMINSTER

ENGINEERS TO TAKE SURVEY OF HIGHWAY TO TERRACE

B.C.'s Premier-to-be Was Country Doctor Eleven Years Ago

HAILS FROM PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND AND CROSSED CONTINENT TO BECOME HARD-WORKING RIGHT-HAND MAN TO PREMIER JOHN OLIVER

(By Charles L. Shaw, in Financial Post)

One windy autumn afternoon eleven years ago a country doctor whose name was familiar only in the distant community where he made his home, walked up the steps of the British Columbia parliament buildings in Victoria to tackle a job which a few days before he had never imagined would be his.

The country doctor appeared in the capital city just a few days after the Liberals, led by the late Harlan Carey Brewster, had been swept into power by a landslide vote. The overwhelming victory staggered even Brewster and when the smoke of campaign cleared away he made a hurried survey of his party in search of cabinet material.

He had the redoubtable John Oliver for his right-hand man and minister of agriculture and railways. He had M. A. Macdonald, the brilliant Vancouver lawyer, for attorney-general. These two men had served with Brewster in the legislature as the sole Liberal members and for that reason, if for no other, they were entitled to portfolios. But when it came to choosing his other ministers Brewster was a bit puzzled. He needed a man representing the southern interior and he recalled the young country doctor that he had met in Greenland during the feverish days of the campaign—the young doctor who had once been a school teacher and who had served as alderman and mayor of the old mining town.

"What about this fellow MacLean?" Brewster asked some of his colleagues. "MacLean is safe," was the reply, and a few hours later the country doctor who had been a school teacher knew that he had been selected as minister of education in the Brewster government.

DELANEY WON FROM UZCUDUN

Spaniard Beaten on a Foul After Persistent Warnings from Referee

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—Jack Delaney, French-Canadian contender for the heavyweight title, won from Paolino Uzcedun on a foul in the seventh round of a scheduled fifteen round bout here last night after the Spaniard had been warned several times by the referee.

Delaney who was much improved in his form, outclassed his opponent, cutting his face into a mass of blood but Paulino did not waver.

IN POLITICS TO STAY

When he arrived at the parliament buildings on that autumn day of 1916, Dr. MacLean little realized that he was in politics to stay and that within eleven years he would be chosen by his party to act as premier of British Columbia to one of the most famous of British Columbia's statesmen—John Oliver.

Yet that is precisely what has happened. He is not premier in a nominal sense, but actually he is, for when "Honest John" Oliver, who took over the reins of office after Brewster's death in 1917, announced to his party in caucus a few days ago that illness had forced him to retire there was no question as to his successor. Oliver hardly needed to mention the man of his choice, for Dr. MacLean for the last three years has acted in the premier's role a score of times and in addition has run the treasury, the education, railways and industrial departments. It is not expected that Oliver will ever go back to his office in the parliament buildings, but his party is giving him that cherished privilege of all men whose life has been filled with dynamic action—to die in harness. And Dr. MacLean is carrying on, attending to cabinet reorganization, working out plans for a new election, drafting policies and attending to the hundred and one duties of a premier in a pioneer country.

FINE RECORD OF BUDGETS

MacLean was chosen to carry on because he was known to be safe; because he was known to be a diplomat as well as a sort of governmental handy man; because he was the possessor of a shrewd financial brain that made it possible for him to bring down a series of budgets that have been described as the best in the province's economic history.

"There was a time not so long ago when talk of bankruptcy and financial disaster was frequently heard about

Mayor Gray Nominated and New Westminster Election Will Take Place Very Soon

NEW WESTMINSTER, Aug. 12.—Mayor Gray was unanimously nominated to contest New Westminster at the by-election made necessary through the death of the late Dr. Rothwell. A Liberal convention was held here last night and Gray was the unanimous choice.

Acting Premier MacLean announced that the election would be held before September 1.

Speaking in support of Gray, Dr. MacLean said there were three critical divisions in the House last session and the government emerged with majorities of seven, nine and eleven respectively. Where, then, was weakness found in these the alleged "Liberals' last legs."

"This government can carry on until it chooses to go to the country," declared the minister. "In talking over the situation with Mayor Gray beforehand," he concluded, "the question of cabinet rank arose. Gray told me he was mayor and would not give up the position for a portfolio. He felt he could serve his community best by remaining a private member."

ELECTION DATE

VICTORIA, Aug. 12.—It was announced today by the government that the New Westminster by-election would take place on August 25 and nominations close on August 22.

WOOLLEN MILLS FOR VICTORIA PROPOSED

City Asked to Help With Financing of Concern Which Sees Success Ahead

VICTORIA, Aug. 12.—Mayor J. Carl Pendray will call a meeting at an early date of prominent citizens to consider financing the proposed worsted mill, details of which will be left in the hands of His Worship and the industrial committee. This decision was come to at a meeting of the city council, when this clause of the industrial committee's report was adopted.

Alderman Holmes, in recommending that this meeting be called, said he had heard that the estimates for the building were satisfactory. "It is already known that after full investigation Mr. Moore concludes worsted mill here is assured of success and has good prospects of developing into a large and flourishing industry. Detailed figures set up by Mr. Moore prove this. The only question remaining is one of financing, which this meeting could advise us on."

$210,000 is needed to establish the industry here. Mr. Moore is putting up $40,000, so that the total capitalization of the company would be $250,000. The cost of erecting the building will be about $40,000.
