Fashion Fancies

Here is a suit that was designed with the college girl in mind. Of Kashmere, it comes in beige or blue.

The costume includes a silk blouse of light tan, or light blue and a slipover waistcoat of kashmere, with bands of brown or navy.

The skirt is characterized by novel pleats, the roll collar and the cuffs of the jacket are banded in the darker shade, and nautical motifs trim the blouse. A distinctive costume, indeed.

Man in the Moon

This is the day of the Liberal convention. Much depends on the choice made by the delegates.

Women may not be braver than men but they are apt to show more backbone.

We are told there is one law for the rich and another for the poor; the lawbreaker finds out that the legislators at Victoria and Ottawa are not as idle as they might be and there are laws by the thousand.

Remember this boys, it's the ones who stick to their party through thick and thin who get the jobs.

Some people are invited because it makes the host and hostess feel so happy when they're gone.

Women do not like the hunting season. They say the men have the fun and they do the work.

But there are plenty of wives of local nimrods who do not have much special cooking to do after a hunting trip. The work is drying out and hanging up the old dirty clothes.

J. C. Brady M. P. is said to be shivering in his shoes when he contemplates the array of candidates on the other side. The Liberals should invite him to the convention tonight to help them choose.
