and cranberry sauce

When the first white settlers on this continent felt the urge to give thanks that their crops were safely in, Father took his blunderbuss and shot a wild turkey while Mother ventured into the marsh for cranberries. Turkey and cranberry sauce did not 2, come out of the storehouse—so they became symbols for extra thanksgiving.

As you sit back after your Thanksgiving dinner in 1939, your pipe, cigar and cigarette give, if you come to think of it, cause for extra thanks.

For the industry which supplies you with the peaceful pleasures of smoking now supports some 300,000 of your fellow Canadians and adds to the work and wages of many thousands more on farms and railroads, in factories and stores. This is important to you, whoever you are, because Canada is more than a stretch of territory. It is a community of interests, an organization for living through which we all make our livelihood and in which we dwell in enviable comfort and security . . . And all this has been developed in a land which was forest and marshes when turkey and cranberry sauce became viands of thanksgiving.
