

While it may be late in the day, it is satisfactory to see the city council taking an interest in the matter of reorganizing locally for post-war rehabilitation. Certainly, there should be no time lost now in taking what steps we can as a community to meet the situation which is already arising with the return of the servicemen to civil life and the release of the war workers from their jobs, a situation of which some communities have already had an alarming foretaste.

One of the functions of the community organization is to make a survey of possible employment and opportunities and to have information readily available for the assistance of those who will need it. Some communities have already gone a long way along these lines.

rehabilitation organization might very well do very much towards obviating a good deal of confusion, misunderstanding and even hardship. It would help many people individually as well as the community as a whole.

One Local Industry . . .

Difficulties in the matter of material and manpower shortage notwithstanding, there is even now a substantial and healthy activity at Prince Rupert in the industry of fishing craft building although a good many of the uptown people may not realize what is going on even now at Cow Bay in this regardto say nothing of Seal Cove, Digby Island and elsewhere,

A situation whereby many fishermen are in need of new boats and are in a healthy position to finance them presents a rosy picture for the small boat building industry for some time to come.

Fortunately, Prince Rupert is fairly well equipped to carry out such work. They know how to build boats here at Prince Rupert and have the equipment to do the work. Now that the war is over, the boatbuilders will be soon in an even better position to meet requirements along this line which may well be quite substantial.

This morning quite a stir is being created in fishing circles by the arrival of the packer "Orient" here from Ketchikan to take back a cargo of salmon, chiefly humpbacks and pinks. The canneries at the mouth of the Skeena are beginning to close already and there is still a crying demand for fish in the Alaska

The Intermediate Baseball League race is now becoming decidedly interesting both from the point of view of players and fans. The Colts, Red Sox and Sawmill are running so close that a slight break means a great difference to one team or the other.

view of what residents of this picturesque town anticipate in the way of tourist patronage when peacetime ways return is keeping the Hazelton Hotel filled as travellers from Prince Rupert and from the east stop over on their motor journeys. Coupled with the popular optimism is a fear that lack of a planned highway maintenance program will discourage the flow of tourists to the innumerable hunter's and fishermen's paradises which lie along the Prince Rupert highway. Complaints that tourist dollars will not roll in over a bumpy ill-kept highway are common, usually accompanied by dire political threats. "Even if the highway is in fair shape at present, it won't be worth much after another winter if the present neglect continues. The government should settle the status of the western section, then embark on a real maintenance program—but fast"

Catches of more than 20 fish per fisherman are relatively common, some having landed cohoes weighing from 15 to 20 pounds. On some street corner at almost every hour of the day is a fimiliar pattern of sound, laid down by an exultant fisherman.

"This is heaven. I've never seen anything like it before," mused an American officer from Port Edward as his eyes ranged over his day's catch—a small mountain of steelhead, dominated by a 15 pound coho. He profesed to have fished in many of the outstanding fishing spots in the United States.
