TOURISTS FIND

obstacles on his drive from Bellingham to Prince Rupert. Certainly, he says, the difficulties would have discouraged a less determined pair of tourists.

It began at the border crossing at Blaine, where Mr. Conn says, immigration officers were definitely out to discourage him from attempting to drive to Prince Rupert. They were not only unwilling or unable to provide him with any information about the road, but they were insistant that it was impossible to travel.

"I told them that we would try it anyway," he told the Daily News.

The fact that parts of the highway along the Fraser River canyon were washed out and he had to provide a surface by building up logs was part of the game, Mr. Conn continued, but he did object to not being able to get gasoline at a couple of places after 6 p.m. and hotel rooms at 10 p.m.

The former happened to him twice at places which he could not identify from memory and the latter at Williams Lake and Hazelton.

At both Williams Lake and Hazelton he could get no response to repeated attempts to arouse the management in order to get a room although it was only 10 o'clock.

"At both places, we had to wrap ourselves in blankets in the car which we didn't appreciate after a hard day's driving."

Directional signs are another requirement if the highway is going to be attractive to tourists, Mr. Conn believes. Lack of such signs caused him difficulty several times in getting on the right road when leaving towns. At Vanderhoof, he drove several miles up the Fort St. James trail before he realized he was on the wrong road.

"In a lonesome country like this there should be highway markers to tell strangers how far they are from various places," he said. "People who know the country don't realize how much of a help that would be to tourists."

ON TO ALASKA

Mr. and Mrs. Conn left their home at New Haven 10 days ago with the determination to drive to Alaska. Their present journey is only a part of the wanderings they plan for the summer.

Last night, they boarded the steamer Prince Rupert for Ketchikan, taking their car. They plan to spend a couple of weeks there.

"Then we are going to come back here and drive until we get on the Alaska Highway and travel as far as we can go."

Mr. Conn said that he was able to collect a substantial fund of information regarding the Alaska Highway but very little about the road to Prince Rupert. Had he known about the Manson medal which is available to the driver of the first car from New York City to Prince Rupert, he would have tried for it, he said.

"After all, New Haven is just outside of New York."

However, he plans to write some friends and tell them of the conditions required to win the medal. He is sure they will accept the challenge later in the season.

A butcher by trade, Mr. Conn has become almost a professional traveller. He and his wife have been on the road since last October, visiting Mexico, California, Florida and other southern states.

"Now, we are on our way to Alaska."

BOOTH TRACK TEAM RETURNS

Booth Memorial High School's three-man track team returned to the city Wednesday from Vancouver where they competed at the week-end with track teams from high schools from all parts of the province in the annual meet held at Varsity stadium.

Sudden change from dirt tracks to hard-surfaced lanes took its toll on the local team, eliminating two of the runners in the first events last Friday while the third, Gordon Rothwell, came fourth in the finals in the 400-yard dash.

Eric Moore was eliminated in the 880 the previous day, as had been Bob Williamson in the 100 and 220-yard events.

Difficulty in adjusting themselves to hard-surfaced tracks was credited by Coach Jack Evans as a major part of his team's trouble. Mr. Evans returned with the youths today.

Winner of the meet was Oak Bay High School, Victoria, with Trapp Tech of New Westminster coming second.
